

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2007 with funding from Microsoft Corporation

BRINTON'S LIBRARY OF ABORIGINAL AMERICAN LITERATURE.
NUMBER VII.

---

ANCIENT NAHUATL POETRY,

CONTAINING THE NAHUATL TEXT OF XXVII ANCIENT MEXICAN POEMS.

WITH A TRANSLATION, INTRODUCTION, NOTES AND VOCABULARY.

BY

DANIEL G. BRINTON, A.M., M.D.,

Professor of American Linguistics and Archaeology in the University of Pennsylvania.

---

PHILADELPHIA :
D. G. BRINTON,
1890.

LIBRARY
OF ABORIGINAL AMERICAN LITERATURE.

No. VII.

EDITED BY
D. G. BRINTON, M.D.

---

PHILADELPHIA.
1887.

$$\frac{4896}{1819} \approx 2.69$$

PREFACE.

---

It is with some hesitation that I offer this volume to the scientific public. The text of the ancient songs which it contains offers extreme and peculiar difficulties to the translator, and I have been obliged to pursue the task without assistance of any kind. Not a line of them has ever before been rendered into an European tongue, and my endeavors to obtain aid from some of the Nahuatl scholars of Mexico have, for various reasons, proved ineffectual. I am therefore alone responsible for errors and misunderstandings.

Nevertheless, I have felt that these monuments of ancient native literature are so interesting in themselves, and so worthy of publication, that they should be placed at the disposition of scholars in their original form with the best rendering that I could give them at present, rather than to await the uncertain event of years for a better.

The text itself may be improved by comparison with the original MS. and with the copy previously made by the Licentiate Chimalpopoca, referred to on page 48. My own efforts in this direction have been confined to a faithful reproduction in print of the MS. copy of the Abbé Brasseur de Bourbourg.

The Notes, which might easily have been extended, I have confined within moderate compass, so as not to enlarge unduly the bulk of the volume.

To some, the Vocabulary may seem inadequate. I assume that those persons who wish to make a critical study of the original text will provide themselves with the Nahuatl Dictionaries of Molina or Siméon, both of which are now easily obtainable, thanks to Mr. Julius Platzmann for the reprint of Molina. I also assume that such students will acquaint themselves with the rules of grammar and laws of word-building of the tongue, and that they will use the vocabulary merely as a labor-saving means of reaching the themes of compounds and unusual forms of words. Employed in this manner, it will, I hope, be found adequate.

In conclusion, I would mention that there is a large body of Nahuatl literature yet unpublished, both prose and poetry, modern and ancient, and as the Nahuatl tongue is one of the most highly developed on the American continent, it is greatly to be desired that all this material should be at the command of students. The Nahuatl, moreover, is not a difficult tongue; for an Englishman or a Frenchman, I should say it is easier to acquire than German, its grammar being simple and regular, and its sounds soft and sonorous. It has special recommendations, therefore, to one who would acquaint himself with an American language.

CONTENTS.

---

	PAGE
PREFACE, . . . . .	vi
INTRODUCTION,
§ 1. THE NATIONAL LOVE OF POETRY, . . . .	9
§ 2. THE POET AND HIS WORK, . . . .	12
§ 3. THE THEMES AND CLASSES OF THE SONGS, .	13
§ 4. PROSODY OF THE SONGS, . . . .	17
§ 5. THE VOCAL DELIVERY OF THE SONGS, . .	20
§ 6. THE INSTRUMENTAL ACCOMPANIMENT, . .	21
§ 7. THE POETIC DIALECT, . . . .	26
§ 8. THE PRESERVATION OF THE ANCIENT SONGS, . . . . .	31
§ 9. THE LX SONGS OF THE KING NEZAHUAL- COYOTL, . . . . .	35
§ 10. THE HISTORY OF THE PRESENT COLLEC- TION, . . . . .	47
ANCIENT NAHUATL POEMS :
I. SONG AT THE BEGINNING, . . . . .	55
II. A SPRING SONG, AN OTOMI SONG, A PLAIN SONG,	59
III. ANOTHER PLAIN SONG, . . . . .	61
IV. AN OTOMI SONG OF THE MEXICANS, . . . .	65
V. ANOTHER PLAIN SONG OF THE MEXICANS, . .	67
VI. ANOTHER CHALCO-SONG, A POEM OF TETLAPAN QUETZANITZIN, . . . . .	69
VII. ANOTHER, . . . . .	71

	PAGE
VIII. COMPOSED BY A CERTAIN RULER IN MEMORY OF FORMER RULERS, . . . . .	73
IX. AN OTOMI SONG OF SADNESS, . . . . .	75
X. A SPRING SONG OF THE MEXICANS, . . . . .	77
XI. ANOTHER, . . . . .	79
XII. A SPRING SONG, A SONG OF EXHORTATION, BE- CAUSE CERTAIN ONES DID NOT GO TO WAR, . . . . .	81
XIII. A SONG OF HUEXOTZINCO, . . . . .	83
XIV. A CHRISTIAN SONG, . . . . .	87
XV. THE REIGN OF TEZOMOCTLI, . . . . .	89
XVI. A SONG URGING TO WAR, . . . . .	95
XVII. A FLOWER SONG, . . . . .	99
XVIII. A SONG OF TOLLAN, . . . . .	105
XIX. A CHRISTIAN SONG, . . . . .	109
XX. A SONG LAMENTING THE TOLTECS, . . . . .	111
XXI. A SONG OF THE HUEXOTZINCOS, COMING TO ASK AID OF MONTEZUMA AGAINST TLAXCALLA, . . . . .	113
XXII. A FLOWER SONG, . . . . .	117
XXIII. A SONG OF THE PRINCE NEZAHUALCOYOTL, . . . . .	119
XXIV. ANOTHER, . . . . .	121
XXV. A SONG OF LAMENTATION, . . . . .	123
XXVI. A SONG RELATING TO THE LORD NEZAHUAL- PILLI, . . . . .	125
XXVII. A CHRISTIAN SONG, . . . . .	127
NOTES, . . . . .	129
VOCABULARY, . . . . .	149
INDEX OF NAHUATL PROPER NAMES, WITH EXPLANA- TIONS, . . . . .	171

ANCIENT NAHUATL POETRY.

---

INTRODUCTION.

---

§ 1. The National Love of Poetry.

The passionate love with which the Nahuas cultivated song, music and the dance is a subject of frequent comment by the historians of Mexico. These arts are invariably mentioned as prominent features of the aboriginal civilization; no public ceremony was complete without them; they were indispensable in the religious services held in the temples; through their assistance the sacred and historical traditions were preserved; and the entertainments of individuals received their chief lustre and charm from their association with these arts.

The profession of the poet stood in highest honor. It was the custom before the Conquest for every town, every ruler and every person of importance to maintain a company of singers and dancers, paying them fixed salaries, and the early writer, Duran, tells us that this custom continued in his own time, long after the Conquest. He sensibly adds, that he can see nothing improper in it, although it was condemned by some of the Spaniards.<sup>1</sup> In the training of these artists their patrons took a deep personal interest, and were not at all tolerant of neglected duties. We are told that the chief selected the song which was to be sung, and the tune by which it was to be accompanied; and did any one of the choir sing falsely, a drummer beat out of time, or a dancer strike an incorrect attitude, the unfortunate artist was instantly called forth, placed in bonds and summarily executed the next morning!<sup>2</sup>

With critics of such severity to please, no wonder that it was necessary to begin the training early, and to set apart for it definite places and regular teachers. Therefore it was one of the established duties of the teachers in the calmecac or public school, "to teach the pupils all the verses of the sacred songs which were written in characters in their books."<sup>3</sup> There were also special schools, called cuicoyan, singing places, where both sexes were taught to sing the popular songs and to dance to the sound of the drums.<sup>4</sup> In the public ceremonies it was no uncommon occurrence for

---

<sup>1</sup> Diego Duran, Historia de las Indias de Nueva España, Tom. I, p. 233; and compare Geronimo de Mendieta, Historia Ecclesiastica Indiana, Lib. II, cap. 31.

<sup>2</sup> Sahagun, Historia de Nueva España, Lib. VIII, cap. 26.

<sup>3</sup> Sahagun, Historia de Nueva España, Lib. III, cap. 8.

<sup>4</sup> Cuicoyan, from cuica, song, and the place-ending yan, which is added to the impersonal form of the verb, in this instance, cuicoa. Mr. Bancroft entirely misapprehends Tezozomoc's words about these establishments, and gives an erroneous rendering of the term. See his Native Races of the Pacific Coast, Vol. II, p. 290, and Tezozomoc, Cronica Mexicana, cap. 18.

the audience to join in the song and dance until sometimes many thousands would thus be seized with the contagion of the rhythmical motion, and pass hours intoxicated (to use a favorite expression of the Nahuatl poets) with the cadence and the movement.

After the Conquest the Church set its face firmly against the continuance of these amusements. Few of the priests had the liberal views of Father Duran, already quoted; most of them were of the opinion of Torquemada, who urges the clergy "to forbid the singing of the ancient songs, because all of them are full of idolatrous memories, or of diabolical and suspicious allusions of the same character."<sup>1</sup>

To take the place of the older melodies, the natives were taught the use of the musical instruments introduced by the Spaniards, and very soon acquired no little proficiency, so that they could perform upon them, compose original pieces, and manufacture most of the instruments themselves.<sup>2</sup>

To this day the old love of the song and dance continues in the Indian villages; and though the themes are changed, the forms remain with little alteration. Travelers describe the movements as slow, and consisting more in bending and swaying the body than in motions of the feet; while the songs chanted either refer to some saint or biblical character, or are erotic and pave the way to orgies.<sup>1</sup>

---

<sup>1</sup> Juan de Torquemada, Monarquia Indiana, Lib. VI, cap. 43.

<sup>2</sup> Torquemada, Monarquia Indiana, Lib. XVII, cap. 3. Didacus Valades, who was in Mexico about 1550, writes of the natives: "Habent instrumenta musica permulta in quibus æmulatione quadam se exercent." Rhetorica Christiana, Pars. IV, cap. 24.

§ 2. The Poet and his Work.

The Nahuatl word for a song or poem is cuicatl. It is derived from the verb cuica, to sing, a term probably imitative or onomatopoeitic in origin, as it is also a general expression for the twittering of birds. The singer was called cuicani, and is distinguished from the composer of the song, the poet, to whom was applied the term cuicapicqui, in which compound the last member, picqui, corresponds strictly to the Greek ποιητής, being a derivative of piqui, to make, to create.<sup>2</sup> Sometimes he was also called cuicatlantlami, "skilled in song."

It is evident from these words, all of which belong to the ancient language, that the distinction between the one who composed the poems and those who sang them was well established, and that the Nahuatl poetry was, therefore, something much above mere improvisation, as some have thought. This does not alter the fact that a professed bard usually sang songs of his own composition, as well as those obtained from other sources. This is obvious from the songs in this collection, many of which contain the expression ni cuicani, I, the singer, which also refers to the maker of the song.

<sup>1</sup> Descriptions are given by Edward Mühlentfordt, Die Republik Mexico, Bd. I, pp. 250-52 (Hannover, 1844).

<sup>2</sup> Molina translates piqui, "crear ó plasmar Dios alguna cosa de nuevo." Vocabulario de la Lengua Mexicana, s. v.

In the classical work of Sahagun, the author describes the ancient poet: "The worthy singer has a clear mind and a strong memory. He composes songs himself and learns those of others, and is always ready to impart either to the fellows of his craft. He sings with a well-trained voice, and is careful to practice in private before he appears before the public. The unworthy singer, on the other hand, is ignorant and indolent. What he learns he will not communicate to others. His voice is hoarse and untrained, and he is at once envious and boastful."<sup>1</sup>

§ 3. The Themes and Classes of the Songs.

From what he could learn about them some two centuries or more after the Conquest, the antiquary Boturini classified all the ancient songs under two general heads, the one treating mainly of historical themes, while the other was devoted to purely fictitious, emotional or imaginative subjects.<sup>2</sup> His terse classification is expanded by the Abbé Clavigero, who states that the themes of the ancient poets were various, some chanting the praises of the gods or petitioning them for favors, others recalled the history of former generations, others were didactic and inculcated correct habits of life, while others, finally, were in lighter vein, treating of hunting, games and love.<sup>3</sup>

His remarks were probably a generalization from a chapter in Torquemada's Monarquía Indiana, in which that writer

<sup>1</sup> Sahagun, Historia de Nueva España, Lib. X, cap. 8.

<sup>2</sup> Boturini, Idea de una Nueva Historia General, p. 97.

<sup>3</sup> Clavigero, Storia antica di Messico, Lib. VII, p. 175.

states that the songs at the sacred festivals differed in subject with the different months and seasons. Thus, in the second month of their calendar, at its stated festival, the people sang the greatness of their rulers; in the seventh month all the songs were of love, of women, or of hunting; in the eighth the chants recalled the noble deeds of their ancestors and their divine origin; while in the ninth month nothing was heard but verses fraught with lamentation for the dead.<sup>1</sup> With less minuteness, Father Duran gives almost the same information. He himself had often heard the songs which Montezuma of Tenochtitlan, and Nezahualpizintli of Tezcucu, had ordered to be composed in their own honor, describing their noble lineage, their riches, their grandeur and their victories. These songs were in his day still sung at the public dances of the natives, and he adds, "although they were filled with laudation of their ancient rulers, it gave me much pleasure to hear the praises of such grandeur." There were other poets, he observes, who lived in the temples and composed songs exclusively in honor of the gods.<sup>2</sup>

These general expressions may be supplemented by a list of terms, specifying particular classes of songs, preserved by various writers. These are as follows:—

melahuacuicatl: this is translated by Tezozomoc, "a straight and true song."<sup>3</sup> It is a compound of melahuac, straight, direct, true; and cuicatl, song. It was a begin-

---

<sup>1</sup> Torquemada, Monarquia Indiana, Lib. X, cap. 34.

<sup>2</sup> Duran, Hist. de la Indias de Nueva España, Tom. I, p. 233.

<sup>3</sup> Tezozomoc, Cronica Mexicana, cap. 64.

ning or opening song at the festivals, and apparently derived its name from its greater intelligibility and directness of expression. A synonym, derived from the same root, is tlamelaauhcaoyotl, which appears in the title to some of the songs in the present collection.

xopancuicatl: this term is spelled by Ixtlilxochitl, xompa-cuicatl, and explained to mean "a song of the spring" (from xopan, springtime, cuicatl, song). The expression seems to be figurative, referring to the beginning or early life of things. Thus, the prophetic songs of Nezahualcoyotl, those which he sang when he laid the foundation of his great palace, bore this name.<sup>1</sup>

teuccuicatl: songs of the nobles (teuctli, cuicatl). These were also called quauhcuicatl, "eagle songs," the term quauhtli, eagle, being applied to distinguished persons.

xochicuicatl: flower-song, one singing the praises of flowers.

icnocuicatl: song of destitution or compassion.

noteuhcuicaliztli: "the song of my lords." This appears to be a synonymous expression for teuccuicatl; it is mentioned by Boturini, who adds that on the day sacred to the god Xiuhteuctli the king began the song so called.<sup>2</sup> miccacuicatl: the song for the dead (miqui, to die, cuicatl). In this solemn chant the singers were seated on the ground, and their hair was twisted in plaits around their heads.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Ixtlilxochitl, Historia Chichimeca, cap. 47.

<sup>2</sup> Boturini, Idea de una Nueva Historia General, p. 90.

<sup>3</sup> Tezozomoc, Cronica Mexicana, cap. 53.

In addition to the above terms drawn from the subject or character of the songs, there were others, of geographical origin, apparently indicating that the song, or its tune, or its treatment was borrowed from another locality or people. These are:—

Huexotzincayotl: a song of Huexotzinco, a Nahuatl town, situate east of the Lake of Tezcuco. This song was sung by the king and superior nobles at certain festivals, and, in the prescribed order of the chants, followed a melahuacuicatl.<sup>1</sup>

Chalcayotl: a song of Chalco, on the lake of the same name. This followed the last mentioned in order of time at the festivals.

Otoncuicatl: a song of the Otomis. These were the immediate neighbors of the Nahuas, but spoke a language radically diverse. The songs so-called were sung fourth on the list.

Cuextecayotl: a song of the country of the Cuexteca, or Cuextlan, a northern province of Mexico.

Tlauancacuextecayotl: a song of the country of the Tlauancacuexteca.

Anahuacayotl: a song of Anahuac, that is, of a country near the water, either the valley of Mexico, or the shores of the ocean.

Some very ancient sacred songs were referred to by Tezozomoc as peculiar to the worship of Huitzilopochtli, and, indeed, introduced by this potent divinity. From their names, cuitlaxoteyotl, and tecuilhuicuatl,<sup>1</sup> I judge that they referred to some of those pederastic rites which still prevail extensively among the natives of the pueblos of New Mexico, and which have been described by Dr. William A. Hammond and other observers.<sup>2</sup> One of these songs began,

---

<sup>1</sup> See Sahagun, Historia de Nueva España, Lib. IV, chap. 17, and Tezozomoc, Cronica Mexicana, cap. 64.

Cuicoyan	nohuan	mitotia ;
In-the-place-of-song	with-me	they-dance.

But the old chronicler, who doubtless knew it all by heart, gives us no more of it.<sup>3</sup>

§ 4. Prosody of the Songs.

The assertion is advanced by Boturini that the genuine ancient Nahuatl poetry which has been preserved is in iambic metre, and he refers to a song of Nezahualcoyotl in his collection to prove his opinion. What study I have given to the prosody of the Nahuatl tongue leads me to doubt the correctness of so sweeping a statement. The vocalic elements of the language have certain peculiarities which prevent its poetry from entering unencumbered into the domain of classical prosody.

The quantity of Nahuatl syllables is a very important element in the pronunciation of the tongue, but their quantity is not confined, as in Latin, to long, short, and common. The Nahuatl vowels are long, short, intermediate, and "with stress," or as the Spanish grammarians say, "with a jump," con saltillo. The last mentioned is peculiar to this tongue. The vowel so designated is pronounced with a momentary suspension or catching of the breath, rendering it emphatic.

<sup>1</sup> Cuitlaxoteyotl, from cuitatl, mierda; tecuilhuicuatl, from tecuilhuaztli, sello, tecuilonti, el que lo haze a otro, pecando contra natura. Molina, Vocabulario.

<sup>2</sup> William A. Hammond, The Disease of the Scythians (morbus feminarum) and Certain Analogous Conditions, in the American Journal of Neurology and Psychiatry, 1882.

<sup>3</sup> Cronica Mexicana, cap. 2.

These quantities are prominent features in the formal portions of the language, characterizing inflections and declinations. No common means of designating them have been adopted by the grammarians, and for my present purpose, I shall make use of the following signs:—

- ă , short.
- a , intermediate.
- ā , long.
- â , with stress.

The general prosodic rules are :—

1. In polysyllabic words in which there are no long vowels, all the vowels are intermediate.
2. The vowels are long in the penultimate of the plurals of the imperatives when the preterit of the verb ends in a vowel; the ā of the cān of the imperatives; the ī of the tī of the gerundives; the last vowel of the futures when the verb loses a vowel to form them; the penultimates of passives in lo, of impersonals, of verbals in oni, illi, olli and oca, of verbal nouns with the terminations yan and can; the ō of abstract nouns in otl in composition; and those derived from long syllables.
3. Vowels are "with stress" when they are the finals in the plurals of nouns and verbs, also in the perfect preterite, in possessives ending in â, ê, ô, and in the penultimate of nouns ending in tli, tla and tle when these syllables are immediately preceded by the vowel.<sup>1</sup>

The practical importance of these distinctions may be illustrated by the following examples :—

tâtli , = father.

tâtli , = thou drinkest.

tâtli , = we drink.

It is, however, evident from this example that the quantity of Nahuatl syllables enters too much into the strictly formal part of the language for rules of position, such as some of those above given, to be binding; and doubtless for this reason the eminent grammarian Carlos de Tapia Zenteno, who was professor of the tongue in the University of Mexico, denies that it can be reduced to definite rules of prosody like those of the Latin.<sup>2</sup>

Substituting accent for quantity, there would seem to be an iambic character to the songs. Thus the first words of Song I, were probably chanted :—

Nind' yolno' notzd' campd' nicû iz' yec tli' ahui acd' xochill' :
etc.

<sup>1</sup> On this subject the reader may consult Paredes, Compendio del Arte de la Lengua Mexicana, pp. 5, 6, and Sandoval, Arte de la Lengua Mexicana, pp. 60, 61. Tapia Zenteno whose Arte Novissima de la Lengua Mexicana was published in 1753, rejects altogether the saltillo, and says its invention is of no use except to make students work harder! (pp. 3, 4.) The vowels with saltillo, he maintains, are simply to be pronounced with a slight aspiration. Nevertheless, the late writers continue to employ and describe the saltillo, as Chimalpopoca, Epítome ó Modo Fácil de aprender el Idioma Nahuatl, p. 6. (Mexico, 1869.)

<sup>2</sup> Arte Novissima de la Lengua Mexicana, pp. 3, 4.

But the directions given for the drums at the beginning of Songs XVIII, XIX, etc., do not indicate a continuance of these feet, but of others, as in XIX:—

U—, U—, U—, UU—, U—, U—, U—, etc.

Indeed, we may suppose that the metre varied with the subject and the skill of the poet. This, in fact, is the precise statement of Father Duran,<sup>1</sup> who speaks of the native poets as “giving to each song a different tune (sonada), as we are accustomed in our poetry to have the sonnet, the octava rima and the terceto.”

§ 5. The Vocal Delivery of the Song.

Descriptions of the concerts so popular among the Nahuas have been preserved by the older writers, and it is of the highest importance to understand their methods in order to appreciate the songs presented in this volume.

These concerts were held on ceremonial occasions in the open air, in the village squares or in the courtyards of the houses. They began in the morning and usually continued until nightfall, occasionally far into the night. The musicians occupied the centre of the square and the trained singers stood or sat around them. When the sign was given to begin, the two most skillful singers, sometimes a man and a woman, pronounced the first syllables of the song slowly but with a sharp emphasis;<sup>2</sup> then the drums began in a low tone, and gradually increased in strength as the song proceeded; the other singers united their voices until the whole chorus was in action, and often the bystanders, to the numbers of thousands, would ultimately join in the words of some familiar song, keeping time by concerted movements of the hands and feet.

---

<sup>1</sup> Duran, Historia de Nueva España, Tom. I, p. 230.

<sup>2</sup> The singer who began the song was called cuicaito, “the speaker of the song.”

Each verse or couplet of the song was repeated three or four times before proceeding to the next, and those songs which were of the slowest measure and least emotional in character were selected for the earlier hours of the festivals. None of the songs was lengthy, even the longest, in spite of the repetitions, rarely lasting over an hour.<sup>1</sup>

The tone in which the words were chanted is described by Clavigero, Mühlentpfordt and other comparatively recent travelers as harsh, strident and disagreeable to the European ear. Mendieta calls it a "contra-bass," and states that persons gifted with such a voice cultivated it assiduously and were in great demand. The Nahuas call it tozquitl, the singing voice, and likened it to the notes of sweet singing birds.

§ 6. The Instrumental Accompaniment.

The Nahuas were not acquainted with any stringed instrument. They manufactured, however, a variety of objects from which they could extract what seemed to them melodious sounds. The most important were two forms of drums, the huchuetl and the teponastli.

---

<sup>1</sup> The most satisfactory description of these concerts is that given by Geronimo de Mendieta, Historia Ecclesiastica Indiana, Lib. II, cap. 31. I have taken some particulars from Boturini and Sahagun.

The word huchuetl means something old, something ancient, and therefore important and great. The drum so-called was a hollow cylinder of wood, thicker than a man's body, and usually about five palms in height. The end was covered with tanned deerskin, firmly stretched. The sides were often elaborately carved and tastefully painted. This drum was placed upright on a stand in front of the player and the notes were produced by striking the parchment with the tips of the fingers.

A smaller variety of this instrument was called tlapanhuehuetl, or the half drum, which was of the same diameter but only half the height.<sup>1</sup> Still another variety was the yopihuehuetl, "the drum which tears out the heart,"<sup>2</sup> so called either by reason of its penetrating and powerful sound, or because it was employed at the Yopico, where that form of human sacrifice was conducted.

The teponaztli was a cylindrical block of wood hollowed out below, and on its upper surface with two longitudinal parallel grooves running nearly from end to end, and a third in the centre at right angles to these, something in the shape of the letter I. The two tongues left between the grooves were struck with balls of rubber, ulli, on the ends of handles or drum sticks. These instruments varied greatly in size, some being five feet in length, and others so small that they could conveniently be carried suspended to the neck. The teponaztli was the house instrument of the Nahuas. It was played in the women's apartments to amuse the noble ladies, and the war captains carried one at the side to call the attention of their cohorts on the field of battle (Sahagun). The word is derived from the name of the tree whose wood was selected to make the drum, and this in turn from the verb teponasoa, to swell, probably from some peculiarity of its growth.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Literally, "the broken drum," from tlapana, to break, as they say tlapanhuimetzli, half moon. It is described by Tezozomoc as "un atambor bajo." Cronica Mexicana, cap. 53.

<sup>2</sup> From yollotl, heart, and pi, to tear out. The instrument is mentioned by Tezozomoc, Cronica Mexicana, cap. 48. On the Yopico, and its ceremonies, see Sahagun, Historia de Nueva España, Lib. II, cap. 1, and Appendix.

A much superior instrument to the teponaztli, and doubtless a development from it, was the tecomapiloa, "the suspended vase" (tecomatl, gourd or vase, piloa, to hang or suspend). It was a solid block of wood, with a projecting ridge on its upper surface and another opposite, on its lower aspect; to the latter one or more gourds or vases were suspended, which increased and softened the sound when the upper ridge was struck with the ulli.<sup>2</sup> This was undoubtedly the origin of the marimba, which I have described elsewhere.<sup>3</sup>

---

<sup>1</sup> Simeon, however, thinks the name arose from the growing and swelling of the sound of the instrument (notes to Jourdanet's translation of Sahagun, p. 28). Mr. H. H. Bancroft gives the astonishing translation of teponaztli, "wing of stone vapor!" (Native Races of the Pacific States, Vol. II, p. 293.) Brasseur traced the word to a Maya-Quiche root, tep. In both Nahuatl and Maya this syllable is the radicle of various words meaning to increase, enlarge, to grow strong or great, etc.

<sup>2</sup> Sahagun, Hist. de Nueva España, Lib. II, cap. 27.

<sup>3</sup> See The Güegüence, a Comedy ballet in the Nahuatl Spanish dialect of Nicaragua, Introd., p. 29. (Philadelphia, 1883.)

The musical properties of these drums have been discussed by Theodor Baker. The teponaztli, he states, could yield but two notes, and could not have been played in accord with the huehuetl. It served as an imperfect contra-bass.<sup>1</sup>

The omichicahuaz, "strong bone," was constructed somewhat on the principle of a teponaztli. A large and long bone was selected, as the femur of a man or deer, and it was channeled by deep longitudinal incisions. The projections left between the fissures were rasped with another bone or a shell, and thus a harsh but varied sound could be produced.<sup>2</sup>

The tetzilacatl, the "vibrator" or "resounder," was a sheet of copper suspended by a cord, which was struck with sticks or with the hand. It appears to have been principally confined to the sacred music in the temples.

The ayacachtli was a rattle formed of a jar of earthenware or a dried gourd containing pebbles which was fastened to a handle, and served to mark time in the songs and dances. An extension of this simple instrument was the ayacachicahualiztli, "the arrangement of rattles," which was a thin board about six feet long and a span wide, to which were attached bells, rattles and cylindrical pieces of hard wood. Shaking this produced a jingle-jangle, agreeable to the native ear. The Aztec bells of copper, tzilinilli, are really metallic rattles, like our sleigh bells. They are often seen in collections of Mexican antiquities. Other names for them were coyolli and yoyotli.

---

<sup>1</sup> Theodor Baker, Ueber die Musik der Nord-Amerikanischen Wilden., pp. 51-53. (Leipzig, 1882.)

<sup>2</sup> Omitl, bone, chichahuac, strong. A specimen made of the bone of a fossil elephant is possessed by Señor A. Chavero, of Mexico. See Tezozomoc, Cronica Mexicana, cap. 55, and the note of Orozco y Berra to that passage in the Mexican edition. Also Sahagun, Hist. de Nueva España, Lib. VIII, cap. 20, who likewise describes most of the instruments referred to in this section.

Various forms of flutes and fifes, made of reeds, of bone or of pottery, were called by names derived from the word pitzaua, to blow (e.g., tlapitzalli, uilacapitzli), and sometimes, as being punctured with holes, zozolotli, from zotl, the awl or instrument used in perforating skins, etc. Many of those made of earthenware have been preserved, and they appear to have been a highly-esteemed instrument, as Sahagun mentions that the leader of the choir of singers in the temple bore the title tlapitzcatzin, "the noble flute player."

Large conches were obtained on the seashore and framed into wind instruments called quiquiztli and tecciztli, whose hoarse notes could be heard for long distances, and whistles of wood, bone and earthenware added their shrill notes to the noise of the chanting of the singers. The shell of the tortoise, ayotl, dried and suspended, was beaten in unison with such instruments.

Recent researches by competent musical experts conducted upon authentic specimens of the ancient Mexican instruments have tended to elevate our opinion of their skill in this art. Mr. H. T. Cresson, of the Academy of Natural Sciences, Philadelphia, has critically examined the various Aztec clay flutes, whistles, etc., which are there preserved, and has reached the following conclusions:—

"I. That upon the four-holed clay flageolets the chromatic and diatonic scales can be produced with a full octave.

"II. That the clay whistles or pitch pipes, which may be manipulated in quartette, will produce an octave and a fourth.

"III. From the facts above shown, the Aztecs must have possessed a knowledge of the scales as known to us, which has been fully tested by comparison with the flute and organ."<sup>1</sup>

This result indicates for the instrumental accompaniment a much higher position in musical notation than has hitherto been accepted.

§ 7. The Poetic Dialect.

All the old writers who were familiar with the native songs speak of their extreme obscurity, and the difficulty of translating them. No one will question the intimate acquaintance with the Nahuatl language possessed by Father Sahagun; yet no one has expressed more strongly than he the vagueness of the Nahuatl poetic dialect. "Our enemy on earth," he writes, "has prepared a thick woods and a dangerous ground full of pitfalls, wherein to devise his evil deeds and to hide himself from attack, as do wild beasts and venomous serpents. This woods and these pitfalls are the songs which he has inspired to be used in his service, as praises to his honor, in the temples and elsewhere; because they are composed with such a trick that they proclaim only what the devil commands, and are understood only by those to whom they are addressed. It is well known that the cavern, woods or depths in which the devil hides himself were these chants or psalms which he himself has composed, and which cannot be understood in their true significance except by those who are accustomed to the peculiar style of their language."<sup>1</sup>

---

<sup>1</sup> H. T. Cresson, On Aztec Music, in the Proceedings of the Academy of Natural Sciences, Philadelphia, 1883.

Not less positive are the expressions of Father Diego Duran, contemporary of Sahagun, and himself well versed in the native tongue. "All their songs," he observes, "were composed in such obscure metaphors that scarcely any one can understand them unless he give especial attention to their construction."<sup>2</sup> The worthy Boturini was puzzled by those which he had collected, and writes, "the songs are difficult to explain, because they mystify historical facts with constant allegorizing,"<sup>3</sup> and Boturini's literary executor, Don Mariano Echevarria y Veitia, who paid especial attention to the poetic fragments he had received, says frankly: "The fact is, that as to the songs I have not found a person who can fully translate them, because there are many words in them whose signification is absolutely unknown to-day, and moreover which do not appear in the vocabularies of Molina or others."<sup>4</sup>

The Abbé Clavigero speaks in somewhat more definite

---

<sup>1</sup> Sahagun, Historia de Nueva España, Lib. II, Appendice.

<sup>2</sup> Duran, Historia de las Indias de Nueva España, Tom. I, p. 233.

<sup>3</sup> Boturini, Idea de una Nueva Historia General, Appendice, p. 95.

<sup>4</sup> Echevarria, Historia del Origen de las Gentes de Nueva España, Discurso Preliminar.

terms of the poetic forms and licenses of the language. He notes that in the fragments of the ancient verses which had been preserved until his day there were inserted between the significant words certain interjections and meaningless syllables, apparently to fill out the metre. Nevertheless, he considered the language of the chants, "pure, pleasant, brilliant, figurative and replete with allusions to the more pleasing objects in nature, as flowers, trees, brooks, etc."<sup>1</sup>

It is quite evident from the above extracts that in the translation of the ancient songs in the present volume we must be prepared for serious difficulties, the more so as the Nahuatl language, in the opinion of some who are the best acquainted with it, lends itself with peculiar facility to ambiguities of expression and obscure figures of speech.<sup>2</sup> Students of American ethnology are familiar with the fact that in nearly all tribes the language of the sacred songs differs materially from that in daily life.

Of the older grammarians, Father Carochi alone has left us actual specimens of the ancient poetic dialect, and his observations are regrettably brief. They occur

<sup>1</sup> Clavigero, Storia Antica di Messico, Lib. VII, p. 175.

<sup>2</sup> "Ihre Sprachen sind überreich an doppelsinnigen Ausdrücken die sie absichtlich anwenden um ihre Gedanken zu verbergen. Geistliche haben mir versichert, dass sie obgleich der Aztekischen Sprache vollständig mächtig, oft den wahren Sinn einer Beichte nicht zu verstehen vermochten, weil die Beichtende sich in räthselhafter und metaphorreicher Weise auszudrücken pflegten." Carlos von Gager, Charakteristik der Indianischen Bevölkerung Mexico's, p. 17 (in the Mit. der Geog. Gesell., Wien. 1837).

in his chapter on the composition of nouns and read as follows: <sup>1</sup>—

“The ancient Indians were chary in forming compounds of more than two words, while those of to-day exceed this number, especially if they speak of sacred things; although in their poetic dialect the ancients were also extravagant in this respect, as the following examples show:—

1. Tlāuhquéchōllaztalēhualtō tōnatoc.
2. Ayauhcoçamālōtōnamēyōtimanī.
3. Xiuhcōyólizitzilica in teōcuitlahuēhuētl.
4. Xiuhltapallācuilōlāmoxtlī manca.
5. Nic chālchiuhcozcameca quenmach tōtōma in nocuic.

1. It is gleaming red like the tlauhquechol bird.
2. And it glows like the rainbow.
3. The silver drum sounds like bells of turquoise.
4. There was a book of annals written and painted in colors.

5. I see my song unfolding in a thousand directions, like a string of precious stones.”

---

<sup>1</sup> Carochi's translations are not quite literal. The following notes will explain the compounds:—

1. Tlauitl, red ochre, quecholli, a bird so called, asztatl, a heron, ehualtia, reverential of ehua, to rise up; hence, “It (or he) shone like a noble red-winged heron rising in flight.”

2. Ayauitl, mist; coçamalotl, rainbow; tonameyotl, shining, brightness; ti, connective; mani, substantive verb. “The brightness of the rainbow is there.” There is no conjunction “and”; Father Carochi seems to have carelessly taken ayauh, which is the form of ayauitl in com-

From the specimens presented in this volume and from the above extracts, I would assign the following peculiarities to the poetic dialect of the Nahuatl:—

I. Extreme frequency and richness of metaphor. Birds, flowers, precious stones and brilliant objects are constantly introduced in a figurative sense, often to the point of obscuring the meaning of the sentence.

II. Words are compounded to a much greater extent than in ordinary prose writing.

III. Both words and grammatical forms unknown to the tongue of daily life occur. These may be archaic, or manufactured capriciously by the poet.

IV. Vowels are inordinately lengthened and syllables reduplicated, either for the purpose of emphasis or of meter.

V. Meaningless interjections are inserted for metrical effect, while others are thrown in and repeated in order to express emotion.

VI. The rhetorical figure known as aposiopesis, where a sentence is left unfinished and in an interjectional con-position, for the conjunction auh, and. Each of the lines given is a detached fragment, without connection with the others.

3. xiuitl, something blue or green; coyolli, bells; tzitzilicaliztli, tinkling. "The golden drum's turquoise-bell-tinkling."

4. xiuhcic, blue or green; tlapalli, red; cuiloa, to paint or write; amoxtli, book; manca, imperf. of mani. "There was a book painted in red and green."

5. chalchiuhuitl, the jade; cozcattl, a jewel; mecatl, a string; totoma, frequentative of toma, to unfold, unwind. "I unwind my song like a string of precious jewels."

dition, in consequence of some emotion of the mind, is not rare and adds to the obscurity of the wording.

§ 8. The Preservation of the Ancient Songs.

In a passage already quoted,<sup>1</sup> Sahagun imparts the interesting information that the more important songs were written down by the Nahuas in their books, and from these taught to the youth in the schools. A certain branch of the Mexican hieroglyphic writing was largely phonetic, constructed on that method to which I have applied the adjective ikonomatic, and by which it was quite possible to preserve the sound as well as the sense of sentences and verses.<sup>2</sup> Such attention could have been bestowed only on the sacred, royal, or legendary chants, while the compositions of ordinary poets would only be disseminated by oral teaching.

By one or both of these methods there was a large body of poetic chants the property of the Nahuatl-speaking tribes, when they were subjugated by the Europeans. Among the intelligent missionaries who devoted their lives to mastering the language and translating into it the doctrines of Christianity, there were a few who felt sufficient interest in these chants to write some of them down in the original tongue. Conspicuous among these was the laborious Bernardino de Sahagun, whose works are our most valued sources of information on all that concerns the life of the ancient Nahuas. He collected a number of their sacred hymns, translated them into Spanish, and inserted them into the Appendix to the Second Book of his History of New Spain; but this portion of his work was destroyed by order of the Inquisition, as a note in the original MS. expressly states.<sup>1</sup>

---

<sup>1</sup> See above, page 10.

<sup>2</sup> On the Ikonomatic Method of Phonetic Writing, with special reference to American Archaeology. By D. G. Brinton, in Proceedings of the American Philosophical Society, for October, 1886.

A certain number, however, were preserved in the original tongue, and, as already noted, we find the able grammarian Horatio Carochi, who published his Grammar of the Nahuatl in 1645, quoting lines from some as furnishing examples of the genuine ancient forms of word-building. He could not, therefore, have doubted their antiquity and authenticity.

A number of these must have come to the knowledge and were probably in the possession of the eminent mathematician and antiquary Don Carlos de Sigüenza y Gongora, who lived in the latter half of the same century (died 1700). It was avowedly upon the information which he thought he gleaned from these ancient chants that he constructed his historical theory of the missionary labors of St. Thomas in Mexico in the first century of our era. The title of the work he wrote upon this notion was as follows:—

“Fenix del Occidente San Thomas Apóstol, hallado con el nombre de Quetzalcoatl entre las cenizas de antiguas tradiciones, conservadas en piedras, en Teoamoxtles Tultecas, y en cantares Teochichimecas y Mexicanos.”

For many years this curious work, which was never printed

---

<sup>1</sup> This fact is mentioned by Lord Kingsborough in his great work on Mexico, Vol. VI, p. 533.

was supposed to be lost ; but the original MS. is extant, in the possession of the distinguished antiquary Don Alfredo Chavero, of the City of Mexico.<sup>1</sup> Unfortunately, however, the author did not insert in his work any song in the native language nor a literal translation of any, as I am informed by Señor Chavero, who has kindly examined the work carefully at my request, with this inquiry in view.

Half a century later, when Boturini was collecting his material, he found but very few of the old poems. In the catalogue of his MSS. he mentions (XIX, 1) some fragments of ancient songs, badly written, on European paper, but he does not say whether in the original or translated. The same doubt might rest on the two songs of Nezahualcoyotl named in his Catalogue (V, 2). He does not specifically state that they are in the original. The song of Moquiuhix, King of Tlatilulco, in which he celebrated his victory over the Cuextla, which Boturini states in his text (p. 91) as in his possession, is not mentioned at all in his Catalogue, and it is uncertain whether his copy was in Nahuatl.

His literary friend, however, Don Mariano Echevarria y Veitia, removes the uncertainty about the two songs of Nezahualcoyotl, as he informs us that they were in the original tongue, and adds that he had inserted them in his History without translation.<sup>2</sup> I have examined the manuscript of his work, now in the Lenox Library, New York City, but it does not contain these texts, and evidently the copy used by Bustamente did not.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> It is described in the Anales del Museo Nacional, Tom. III, p. 262.

<sup>2</sup> Echevarria's words are "los pongo en su idioma." Hist. del Origen de las Gentes que poblaron la Nueva España, Discurso Preliminar, in Kingsborough's Mexico, Vol. VIII.

Boturini included the translations of the two odes of Nezahualcoyotl in a work on the Virgin of Guadalupe, only a fragment of which has been preserved. One of the chapters in this Latin Essay is entitled De Indorum Poetarum Canticis sive Prosodiis, in which he introduces Ixtlixochitl's translation and also a song in the original Nahuatl, but the latter is doubtless of late date and unimportant as a really native production.<sup>2</sup>

The fragments of Boturini's library collected by M. Aubin, of Paris, contain a number of the original ancient songs of the highest importance, which make us regret the more that this collection has been up to the present inaccessible to students. In his description of these relics published in 1851, M. Aubin refers to the Historical Annals of the Mexican Nation (§ VIII, 10, of Boturini's Catalogue) as containing "historical songs in a dialect so difficult that I have not been able to translate them entirely," and adds that similar songs are preserved in others of the ancient annals in his hands.<sup>3</sup>

---

<sup>1</sup> See his Tezcucio en los Ultimos Tiempos de sus Antiguos Reyes. Parte IV (Mexico, 1826).

<sup>2</sup> See the description of this fragment of Boturini by Señor Alfredo Chavero in the Anales del Museo Nacional, Tom. III, p. 242.

<sup>3</sup> M. Aubin, Notice sur une Collection d'Antiquités Mexicaines, pp. 8, 9. (Paris, 1851.)

§ 9. The LX Songs of the King Nezahualcoyotl.

The most distinguished figure among the Nahuatl poets was Nezahualcoyotl, ruler of Tezcuco. His death took place in 1472, at the age of eighty years. His father, Ixtlilxochitl, had been deprived of his possessions and put to death by Tezozomoc, King of the Tepanecas, and until the death of the latter at an advanced age in 1427, Nezahualcoyotl could make but vain efforts to restore the power of his family. Much of the time he was in extreme want, and for this reason, and for his savage persistence in the struggle, he acquired the name "the fasting or hungry wolf"—nezahual-coyotl. Another of his names was Acolmiztli, usually translated "arm of the lion," from aculli, shoulder, and miztli, lion.

A third was Yoyontzin, which is equivalent to ceveter nobilis, from yoyoma (cevere, i. e., femora movere in re venera); it is to be understood figuratively as indicating the height of the masculine forces.

When his power became assured, he proved himself a liberal and enlightened patron of the arts and industries. The poetry and music of his native land attracted him the more as he felt within himself the moving god, firing his imagination with poetic vision, the Deus in nobis, calescimus, agitant illo. Not only did he diligently seek out and royally entertain skilled bards, but he himself had the credit of composing sixty chants, and it appears that after the Conquest there were that many written down in Roman characters and attributed to him. We need not inquire too closely whether they were strictly his own composition. Perhaps they were framed on themes which he furnished, or were selected by him from those sung at his court by various bards. The history of the works by royal authors everywhere must not be too minutely scanned if we wish to leave them their reputation for originality.

He was of a philosophic as well as a poetic temperament, and reflected deeply on the problems of life and nature. Following the inherent tendency of the enlightened intellect to seek unity in diversity, the One in the Many, he reached the conclusion to which so many thinkers in all ages and of all races have been driven, that underlying all phenomena is one primal and adequate Cause, the Essence of all Existence. This conclusion he expressed in a philosophic apothegm which was preserved by his disciples, in these words:—

Ipan in chicunauitlamanpan meztica in tloque nahuaque palne nohuani teyocoyani icel teotl oquiyocox in ixquex quex-quex in ittoni ihuan amo ittoni.

“In the ninth series is the Cause of All, of us and of all created things, the one only God who created all things both visible and invisible.”<sup>1</sup>

To perpetuate the memory of this philosophic deduction he caused to be constructed at Tezcuco a stone tower nine stories in height, the ruins of which were visible long after the Spanish occupation. To this tower he gave the name Chililitli, a term of uncertain meaning, but which we find was applied in Tenochtitlan to a building sacred to the Nine Winds.<sup>1</sup> To explain the introduction of this number, I should add that a certain school of Nahuatl priests taught that the heaven above and the earth below were each divided into nine concentric arcs, each leading farther and farther away from the conditions of the present life. Hence, there were nine heavens, abodes of the gods, and nine lower regions, abodes of the souls of the dead. Another school taught that there were not nine but thirteen of these stages.

---

<sup>1</sup> Printed very incorrectly in Lord Kingsborough's edition of Ixtlilxochitl's Relaciones Historicas (Rel. X, Kingsborough, Antiquities of Mexico, Vol. IX, p. 454).

The sixty poems by Nezahualcoyotl are mentioned by various writers as in existence after the Conquest, reduced to writing in the original tongue, and of several of them we have translations or abstracts.<sup>2</sup> Of four the translations claim to be complete, and were published entire for the first time in the original Spanish by Lord Kingsborough in the ninth volume of his great work on the Antiquities of Mexico. Since then they have received various renderings in prose and verse into different languages at the hands of modern writers.

I shall give a literal prose translation from the Spanish, numbering the poems and their verses, for convenience of reference, in the order in which they appear in the pages of Lord Kingsborough.

---

<sup>1</sup> See Sahagun, Historia de Nueva España, Lib. II, Appendix.

<sup>2</sup> Bustamente puts the number of the songs of Nezahualcoyotl at eighty, of which he could find only one extant, and this, as I understand his words, in Spanish only. See his Tezcuco en los Tiempos de sus Antiguos Reyes, p. 253 (Mexico, 1826). When Alexander von Humboldt visited Mexico he sought in vain for any fragment of the songs of the royal bard. Vues des Cordillères, etc., Tom. II, p. 391.

The first is one referred to, and partly translated by Ixtlilxochitl, in his Historia Chichimeca (cap. 47). He calls it a xopancuicatl (see ante, p. 15), and states that it was composed and sung on the occasion of the banquet when the king laid the foundations of his great palace. He gives the first words in the original as follows:—

Tlaxoconcaquican ani Nezahualcoyotzin ;

And the translation :—

“Hear that which says the King Nezahualcoyotl.”

Restoring the much mutilated original to what I should think was its proper form, the translation should read:—

“Listen attentively to what I, the singer, the noble Nezahualcoyotl, say:”—

I.

1. Listen with attention to the lamentations which I, the King Nezahualcoyotl, make upon my power, speaking with myself, and offering an example to others.

2. O restless and striving king, when the time of thy death shall come, thy subjects shall be destroyed and driven forth; they shall sink into dark oblivion. Then in thy hand shall no longer be the power and the rule, but with the Creator, the All-powerful.

3. He who saw the palaces and court of the old King Tezozomoc, how flourishing and powerful was his sway, may see them now dry and withered; it seemed as if they should last forever, but all that the world offers is illusion and deception, as everything must end and die.

4. Sad and strange it is to see and reflect on the prosperity and power of the old and dying King Tezozomoc ; watered with ambition and avarice, he grew like a willow tree rising above the grass and flowers of spring, rejoicing for a long time, until at length, withered and decayed, the storm wind of death tore him from his roots, and dashed him in fragments to the ground. The same fate befell the ancient King Colzatzli, so that no memory was left of him, nor of his lineage.

5. In these lamentations and in this sad song, I now call to memory and offer as an example that which takes place in the spring, and the end which overtook King Tezozomoc ; and who, seeing this, can refrain from tears and wailing, that these various flowers and rich delights are bouquets that pass from hand to hand and all wither and end even in the present life !

6. Ye sons of kings and mighty lords, ponder well and think upon that which I tell you in these my lamentations, of what takes place in spring and of the end which overtook King Tezozomoc ; and who, seeing this, can refrain from tears and wailing that these various flowers and rich delights are bouquets that pass from hand to hand and all wither and end even in the present life !

7. Let the birds now enjoy, with melodious voices, the abundance of the house of the flowery spring, and the butterflies sip the nectar of its flowers.

The second song is preserved in a Spanish metrical translation only, but which from internal evidence I should judge to be quite literal. The words of the poem do not represent it as a composition by the royal poet, but one which was sung before him, and addressed to him. It admonishes him to rejoice in the present moment, as the uncertainties of life and fate must at some time, perhaps very soon, deprive him of their enjoyment.

II.

1. I wish to sing for a moment, since time and occasion are propitious; I hope to be permitted, as my intention merits it, and I begin my song, though it were better called a lamentation.

2. And thou, beloved companion, enjoy the beauty of these flowers, rejoice with me, cast out fears, for if pleasure ends with life, so also does pain.

3. I, singing, will touch the sonorous instrument, and thou, rejoicing in the flowers, dance and give pleasure to God the powerful. Let us be happy in the present, for life is transitory.

4. Thou hast placed thy noble court in Acolhuacan, thine are its lintels, thou hast decked them, and one may well believe that with such grandeur thy state shall increase and grow.

5. O prudent Yoyontzin, famous king and peerless monarch, rejoice in the present, be happy in the springtime, for a day shall come in which thou shalt vainly seek these joys.

6. Then thy destiny shall snatch the sceptre from thy hand, thy moon shall wane, no longer wilt thou be strong and proud, then thy servants shall be destitute of all things.

7. In this sad event, the nobles of thy line, the provinces of might, children of noble parents, lacking thee as their lord, shall taste the bitterness of poverty.

8. They shall call to mind how great was thy pomp, thy triumphs and victories, and bewailing the glory and majesty of the past, their tears will flow like seas.

9. These thy descendants who serve thy plume and crown, when thou art gone, will forsake Culhuacan, and as exiles will increase their woes.

10. Little will fame have to tell of this wondrous majesty, worthy of a thousand heralds; the nations will only remember how wisely governed the three chieftains who held the power,

11. At Mexico, Montezuma the famous and valorous, at Culhuacan the fortunate Nezahualcoyotl, and at the stronghold of Acatlapan, Totoquilhuatli.

12. I fear no oblivion for thy just deeds, standing as thou dost in thy place appointed by the Supreme Lord of All, who governs all things.

13. Therefore, O Nezahualcoyotl, rejoice in what the present offers, crown thyself with flowers from thy gardens, hear my song and music which aim to please thee.

14. The pleasures and riches of this life are but loaned, their substance is vain, their appearance illusory; and so true is this that I ask thee for an answer to these questions:

15. What has become of Cihuapan? Of the brave Quantzintecomatzin? Of Conahuatzin? What of all these people? Perhaps these very words have already passed into another life.

16. Would that we who are now united by the ties of love and friendship could foresee the sharp edge of death, for nothing is certain, and the future ever brings changes.

The third is a "spring song" in which the distinguished warriors of the king are compared to precious stones. Such jewels were believed by the Nahuas to possess certain mysterious powers as charms and amulets, a belief, it is needless to say, found among almost all nations. In verse 18 there is a reference to the superstition that at dawn, when these jewels are exposed to the first rays of the sun, they emit a fine vapor which wafts abroad their subtle potency. The poem is in Spanish verse, and the original is said to have been written down by Don Fernando de Avila, governor of Tlalmanalco, from the mouth of Don Juan de Aguilar, governor of Cultepec, a direct descendant of Nezahualcoyotl.

III.

1. The flowery spring has its house, its court, its palace, adorned with riches, with goods in abundance.
2. With discreet art they are arranged and placed, rich feathers, precious stones, surpassing in luster the sun.
3. There is the valued carbuncle, which from its beautiful center darts forth rays which are the lights of knowledge.
4. There is the prized diamond, sign of strength, shooting forth its brilliant gleams.
5. Here one sees the translucent emerald suggesting the hope of the rewards of merit.

6. Next follows the topaz, equaling the emerald, for the reward it promises is a heavenly dwelling.

7. The amethyst, signifying the cares which a king has for his subjects, and moderation in desires.

8. These are what kings, princes and monarchs delight to place upon their breasts and crowns.

9. All these stones with their varied and singular virtues, adorn Thy house and court, O Father, O Infinite God !

10. These stones which I the King Nezahualcoyotl have succeeded in uniting in loving liens,

11. Are the famous princes, the one called Axaxacatzin, the other Chimalpopoca, and Xicomatzintlamata.

12. To-day, somewhat rejoiced by the joy and words of these, and of the other lords who were with them,

13. I feel, when alone, that my soul is pleased but for a brief time, and that all pleasure soon passes.

14. The presence of these daring eagles pleases me, of these lions and tigers who affright the world,

15. These who by their valor win everlasting renown, whose name and whose deeds fame will perpetuate.

16. Only to-day am I glad and look upon these rich and varied stones, the glory of my bloody battles.

17. To-day, noble princes, protectors of the realm, my will is to entertain you and to praise you.

18. It seems to me that ye answer from your souls, like the fine vapor arising from precious stones,—

19. "O King Nezahualcoyotl, O royal Montezuma, your subjects sustain themselves with your soft dews.

20. "But at last a day shall come which will cut away this power, and all these will be left wretched orphans.

21. "Rejoice, mighty King, in this lofty power which the King of Heaven has granted you, rejoice and be glad.

22. "In the life of this world there is no beginning anew, therefore rejoice, for all good ends.

23. "The future promises endless changes, griefs that your subjects will have to undergo.

24. "Ye see before you the instruments decked with wreaths of odorous flowers; rejoice in their fragrance.

25. "To-day there are peace, and goodfellowship; therefore let all join hands and rejoice in the dances,

26. "So that for a little while princes and kings and the nobles may have pleasure in these precious stones,

27. "Which through his goodness the will of the King Nezahualcoyotl has set forth for you, inviting you to-day to his house."

The fourth song has been preserved in an Otomi translation by the Mexican antiquary Granados y Galvez,<sup>1</sup> and in an abstract by Torquemada.<sup>2</sup> The latter gives the first words as follows:—

Xochitl mamani in huehuetitlan:

Which he translates:—

"There are fresh and fragrant flowers among the groves."

<sup>1</sup> Tardes Americanas, pp. 90–94. (Mexico, 1778.)

<sup>2</sup> Torquemada, Monarquía Indiana, Lib. II, cap. 45. The word huehuetitlan, seems to be a misprint for ahuehuetitlan, from ahuehuētl, with the ligature ti, and the postposition tlán, literally "among the cy-presses."

It is said to have been composed at the time the king dedicated his palace.

IV.

1. The fleeting pomps of the world are like the green willow trees, which, aspiring to permanence, are consumed by a fire, fall before the axe, are upturned by the wind, or are scarred and saddened by age.

2. The grandeurs of life are like the flowers in color and in fate; the beauty of these remains so long as their chaste buds gather and store the rich pearls of the dawn and saving it, drop it in liquid dew; but scarcely has the Cause of All directed upon them the full rays of the sun, when their beauty and glory fail, and the brilliant gay colors which decked forth their pride wither and fade.

3. The delicious realms of flowers count their dynasties by short periods; those which in the morning revel proudly in beauty and strength, by evening weep for the sad destruction of their thrones, and for the mishaps which drive them to loss, to poverty, to death and to the grave. All things of earth have an end, and in the midst of the most joyous lives, the breath falters, they fall, they sink into the ground.

4. All the earth is a grave, and nought escapes it; nothing is so perfect that it does not fall and disappear. The rivers, brooks, fountains and waters flow on, and never return to their joyous beginnings; they hasten on to the vast realms of Tlaloc, and the wider they spread between their margins the more rapidly do they mould their own sepulchral urns. That which was yesterday is not to-day; and let not that which is to-day trust to live to-morrow.

5. The caverns of earth are filled with pestilential dust which once was the bones, the flesh, the bodies of great ones who sate upon thrones, deciding causes, ruling assemblies, governing armies, conquering provinces, possessing treasures, tearing down temples, flattering themselves with pride, majesty, fortune, praise and dominion. These glories have passed like the dark smoke thrown out by the fires of Popocatepetl, leaving no monuments but the rude skins on which they are written.

6. Ha! ha! Were I to introduce you into the obscure bowels of this temple, and were to ask you which of these bones were those of the powerful Achalchiuhtlanextin, first chief of the ancient Toltecs; of Necaxecmitl, devout worshiper of the gods; if I inquire where is the peerless beauty of the glorious empress Xiuitzal, where the peaceable Topiltzin, last monarch of the hapless land of Tulan; if I ask you where are the sacred ashes of our first father Xolotl; those of the bounteous Nopal; those of the generous Tlotzin; or even the still warm cinders of my glorious and immortal, though unhappy and luckless father Ixtlil-xochitl; if I continued thus questioning about all our august ancestors, what would you reply? The same that I reply—I know not, I know not; for first and last are confounded in the common clay. What was their fate shall be ours, and of all who follow us.

7. Unconquered princes, warlike chieftains, let us seek, let us sigh for the heaven, for there all is eternal, and nothing is corruptible. The darkness of the sepulchre is but the strengthening couch for the glorious sun, and the obscurity of the night but serves to reveal the brilliancy of the stars. No one has power to alter these heavenly lights, for they serve to display the greatness of their Creator, and as our eyes see them now, so saw them our earliest ancestors, and so shall see them our latest posterity.

It will be seen that the philosophy of these songs is mostly of the Epicurean and carpe diem order. The certainty of death and the mutability of fortune, observations which press themselves upon the mind of man everywhere, are their principal staples, and cast over them a hue of melancholy, relieved by exhortations to enjoy to the utmost what the present moment offers of pleasure and sensual gratification. Here and there a gleam of a higher philosophy lights the sombre reflections of the bard; his thoughts turn toward the infinite Creator of this universe, and he dimly apprehends that by making Him the subject of his contemplation, there is boundless consolation even in this mortal life.

Both these leading motifs recur over and over again in the songs printed in the original in the present volume, and this similarity is a common token of the authenticity of the book.

§ 10. The History of the Present Collection.

The most recent Mexican writers formally deny that any ancient Mexican poetry is now extant. Thus the eminent antiquary, Don Alfredo Chavero, in his elaborate work,

México á través de los Siglos, says, "the truth is, we know no specimens of the ancient poetry, and those, whether manuscript or printed, which claim to be such, date from after the Conquest."<sup>1</sup> In a similar strain the grammarian Diario Julio Caballero, writes: "There has never come into our hands a single poetic composition in this language. It is said that the great King Nezahualcoyotl was a poet and composed various songs; however that may be, the fact is that we have never seen any such compositions, nor met any person who has seen them."<sup>2</sup>

It is important, therefore, to state the exact provenance of the specimens printed in this volume, many of which I consider to have been composed previous to the Conquest, and written down shortly after the Nahuatl language had been reduced to the Spanish alphabet.

All of them are from a MS. volume in the library of the University of Mexico, entitled Cantares de los Mexicanos y otros opusculos, composed of various pieces in different handwritings, which, from their appearance and the character of the letter, were attributed by the eminent antiquary Don José F. Ramirez, to the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.

The copy I have used is that made by the late Abbé Brasseur (de Bourbourg). It does not appear to be complete, but my efforts to have it collated with the original have not been successful. Another copy was taken by the late well-known Mexican scholar Faustino Chimalpopoca, which was in the possession of Señor Ramirez and sold at the vendue of his books in 1880. It is No. 511 of the catalogue.

---

<sup>1</sup> Op. cit. Tom. I, p. 795.

<sup>2</sup> Grammatica del Idioma Mexicano, p. 180. (Mexico, 1880.)

The final decision of the age of the poems must come from a careful scrutiny of the internal evidence, especially the thoughts they contain and the language in which they are expressed. In applying these tests, it should be remembered that a song may be almost wholly ancient, that is, composed anterior to the Conquest, and yet display a few later allusions introduced by the person who preserved it in writing, so as to remove from it the flavor of heathenism. Some probable instances of this kind will be pointed out in the Notes.

The songs are evidently from different sources and of different epochs. There are two notes inserted in the MS. which throw some light on the origin of a few of the poems. The first is in connection with No. XII. In my copy of the MS, the title of this song is written twice, and between the two the following memorandum appears in Spanish:

“Ancient songs of the native Otomis, which they were accustomed to sing at their festivals and marriages, translated into the Mexican language, the play and the spirit of the song and its figures of speech being always retained; as Your Reverence will understand, they displayed considerable style and beauty, better than I can express with my slight talent; and may Your Reverence at your convenience approve and be entertained by them, as a skilled master of the tongue, as Your Reverence is.”

From its position and from the titles following, this note appears to apply only to No. XII.

The second note is prefixed to No. XIV, which has no title. It is in Nahuatl, and reads as follows:—

†
I H S

Nican ompehua in cuicatl motenehua melahuac Huexotzincayotl ic moquichitoya in tlatoque Huexotzinca mani mecatca; yexcan inic tlatlamantitica, teuccuicatl ahnoço quauhcuicatl, xochicuicatl, icnocuicatl. Auh inic motzotzona huehuetl cencamatl mocauhtih, auh in occencamatl ipan huetzi yetetl ti; auh in huel ic ompehua centetl ti;
auh inic mocuepa quinquac iticpa huehuetzi y huehuetl, zan mocemana in maitl; auh quinquac iyeinepantla occeppa itenco hualcholoa in huehuetl; tel yehuatl itech mottaz, ynima ynaquin cuicani quimati iniuh motzotzona; auh yancuican yenoceppa inin cuicatl ychan D. Diego de Leon, Gobernador Azcapotzalco; yehuatl oquitzotzon in
D. Frco Placido ypan xihuitl 1551, ypan in ezcalilitzin tl Jesu Christo.

This may be freely translated as follows:—

“Here begins a song called a plain song of Huexotzinco

as it was recited by the lords of Huexotzinco. These songs are divided into three classes, the songs of the nobles or of the eagles, the flower songs, and the songs of destitution. (Directions follow for beating the drum in unison with the voices.) This song was sung at the house of Don Diego de Leon, Governor of Azcapotzalco; he who beat the drum was Don Francisco Placido; in the year of the resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ 1551."

This assigns beyond doubt the song in question to the first half of the sixteenth century, and we may therefore take its phraseology as a type of the Nahuatl poetry shortly after the Conquest. It is also stated to be a native composition, and from its contents, it was clearly composed by one of the converts to the Christian faith.

ANCIENT
NAHUATL POEMS.

I. Cuicapeuhcayotl.

1. Ninoyolnonotza, campa nicuiz yectli, ahuiaca xochitl :—Ac nitlatlaniz? Manozo yehuatl nictlatlani in quetzal huitzitziltin, in chalchiuh huitzitzicatzin; manozo ye nictlatlani in zaquan papalotl; ca yehuantin in machiz, ommati, campa cueponi in yectli ahuiac xochitl, tla nitlahuihuiltequi in nican acxoyatzinitzcanquauhtla, manoze nitlahuihuiltequi in tlahuquecholxochiquauhtla; oncan huihuitolihui ahuach tonameyotoc in oncan mocehcemelquixtia; azo oncan niquimittaz intla onechittitique; nocuexanco nictemaz ic niquintlapaloz in tepilhuan, ic niquimellelquixtiz in teteuctin.

2. Tlacazo nican nemi, ye nicaqui in ixochicuicatzin yuhqui tepetl quinnananquilia; tlacazo itlan in meyaquetzalatl, xiuhtotoameyalli, oncan mocuica, momotla, mocuica; nananquilia in centzontlatolli; azo quinnananquilia in coyoltototl, ayacachiçahuacatimani, in nepapan tlazocuicani totome. Oncan quiyectenehua in tlalticpaque hueltetozcatemique.

3. Nic itoaya, nitlaocoltzatzia; ma namechellelti y tlazohuane, niman cactimotlalique, niman hualtato in quetzal huitzitziltin. Aquin tictemohua, cuicanitzine? Niman niquinnananquilia niquimilhuia: Campa catqui in yectli, ahuiac xochitl ic niquimellelquixtiz in amohuampotzitzinhuane? Niman onechicacahuatzque ca nican tlatimitzittitili ticuicani azo nelli ic tiquimellelquixtiz in toquichpohuan in teteuctin.

4. Tepeitic tonacatlalpa, xochitlalpa nechcalaquiqueo oncan on ahuachtotonameyotimani, oncan niquittacaya in nepapan tlazoahuiac xochitl, tlazohuelic xochitl,

I. Song at the Beginning.

1. I am wondering where I may gather some pretty, sweet flowers. Whom shall I ask? Suppose that I ask the brilliant humming-bird, the emerald trembler; suppose that I ask the yellow butterfly; they will tell me, they know, where bloom the pretty, sweet flowers, whether I may gather them here in the laurel woods where dwell the tzinitzcan birds, or whether I may gather them in the flowery forests where the tlaunquechol lives. There they may be plucked sparkling with dew, there they come forth in perfection. Perhaps there I shall see them if they have appeared; I shall place them in the folds of my garment, and with them I shall greet the children, I shall make glad the nobles.

2. Truly as I walk along I hear the rocks as it were replying to the sweet songs of the flowers; truly the glittering, chattering water answers, the bird-green fountain, there it sings, it dashes forth, it sings again; the mocking bird answers; perhaps the coyol bird answers, and many sweet singing birds scatter their songs around like music. They bless the earth pouring out their sweet voices.

3. I said, I cried aloud, may I not cause you pain ye beloved ones, who are seated to listen; may the brilliant humming-birds come soon. Whom do we seek, O noble poet? I ask, I say: Where are the pretty, fragrant flowers with which I may make glad you my noble compeers? Soon they will sing to me, "Here we will make thee to see, thou singer, truly wherewith thou shalt make glad the nobles, thy companions."

4. They led me within a valley to a fertile spot, a flowery spot, where the dew spread out in glittering splendor, where I saw various lovely fragrant flowers, ahuach quequentoc, ayauhcozamalotonameyotimani, oncan nechilhuia, xixochitetequi, in catlehuatl toconnequiz, ma mellelquiza in ticuicani, tiquinmacataciz in tocnihuan in teteuctin in quellelquixtizque in tlalticpaque.

5. Auh nicnocuecuexantia in nepapan ahuiacxochitl, in huel teyolquima, in huel tetlamachti, nic itoaya manozo aca tohuanti hual calaquini, ma cenca miec in ticmamani; auh ca tel ye onimatico nitlanonotztahciz imixpan in tocnihuan nican mochipa tiqualtetequizque in tlazo nepapan ahuiac xochitl ihuan ticuiquihui in nepapan yectliyancuicatl ic tiquimellelquixtizque in tocnihuan in tlalticpactlaca in tepilhuan quauhtliya ocelotl.

6. Ca moch nicuitoya in nicuicani ic niquimicpac xochiti in tepilhuan inic niquimapan in can in mac niquinten; niman niquehuaya yectli yacuicatl ic netimalolo in tepilhuan ixpan in tloque in nahuaque, auh in atley y maceuallo.

7. Can quicuiz? Can quitlaz in huelic xochitl? Auh cuix nohuan aciz aya in xochitlalpan, in tonacatlalpan, in atley y macehuallo in nentlamati? Intla y tlachohua in tlalticpac ca çan quitemacehualtica in tloque in nahuaque, in tlalticpac; ye nican ic chocan noyollo noconilnamiquia in ompa onitlachiato y xochitlalpana nicuicani.

8. Auh nic itoaya tlacazo amo qualcan in tlalticpac ye nican, tlacazo occecn in huilohuayan, in oncan ca in netlamachtilli; tlezannen in tlalticpac? tlacazo occecn yoliliz ximoayan, ma ompa niauh, ma ompa inhuan noncuicati in nepapan tlazototome, ma ompa nicnotlamachti yectliya xochitl ahuiaca xochitl, in teyolquima, in zan tepacca, teahuiaca yhuintia, in zan tepacca, ahuiaca yhuintia.

lovely odorous flowers, clothed with the dew, scattered around in rainbow glory, there they said to me, "Pluck the flowers, whichever thou wishest, mayest thou the singer be glad, and give them to thy friends, to the nobles, that they may rejoice on the earth."

5. So I gathered in the folds of my garment the various fragrant flowers, delicate scented, delicious, and I said, may some of our people enter here, may very many of us be here; and I thought I should go forth to announce to our friends that here all of us should rejoice in the different lovely, odorous flowers, and that we should cull the various sweet songs with which we might rejoice our friends here on earth, and the nobles in their grandeur and dignity.

6. So I the singer gathered all the flowers to place them upon the nobles, to clothe them and put them in their hands; and soon I lifted my voice in a worthy song glorifying the nobles before the face of the Cause of All, where there is no servitude.

7. Where shall one pluck them? Where gather the sweet flowers? And how shall I attain that flowery land, that fertile land, where there is no servitude, nor affliction? If one purchases it here on earth, it is only through submission to the Cause of All; here on earth grief fills my soul as I recall where I the singer saw the flowery spot.

8. And I said, truly there is no good spot here on earth, truly in some other bourne there is gladness; For what good is this earth? Truly there is another life in the hereafter. There may I go, there the sweet birds sing, there may I learn to know those good flowers, those sweet flowers, those delicious ones, which alone pleasurable, sweetly intoxicate, which alone pleasurable, sweetly intoxicate.

II. Xopancuicatl, otoncuicatl, tlamelauhucayotl.

1. Onihualcalac nicuicani nepapan xochitlalpan, huel teellelquixtican, tetlamachtican, oncan ahuach tonameyoquiauhtimani, oncan cuicuica in nepapan tlazototome, on cuicatlaza in coyoltototl cahuantimani inin tozquitzin in quellelquixtia in tloque in nahuaque yehuan Dios, ohuaya, ohuaya.

2. Oncan nicaqui in cuicanelhuayotl in nicuicani, tlacazo amo tlalticpac in peuh yectli yancuicatl, tlacazo ompa in ilhuicatl itic hual caquizti in conehua in tlazocoyoltototl in quimehuilia in nepapan teoquecholme zacuantototl, oncan tlacazo quiyectenehua in tloque in nahuaque, ohuaya, ohuaya.

3. Niyolpoxahua in nicaquia ni cuicani, acoquiza in notlalnamiqulizo quin pepetlatiquiza in ilhuicame, nelcicihuiliz ehecayotiu in iquinalquixtia in ompa ontlatenehua in zacuanhuitzitzil in ilhuicatl itic, ohuaya, ohuaya.

4. Auh nohuiampa nictlachialtia in noyollo auh tlacazo nelli in amo ixquich quehua in tlazotototl, tlacazo ye oc tlapanahuia in ilhuicatl itic y yollo in tloque in nahuaque mochiuhtica, ca intlacamo teuhyotiu in notlalnamiquliz azo huelquinalquixtica ittazo in tlamahuizolli in ilhuicac ic papaqui in ilhuicac tlazototome ixpan in tloque nahuaque, ohuaya, ohuaya.

5. Quenin ah nichocaz in tlalticpac? ye nican tlacazo onca nemoayá ninoztlacahuia, nicitoa aço zan ye ixquich in nican in tlalticpac ontlamian toyolia, macuele ehuatl in tloque in nahuaque, ma ompa inhuan nimitznocuicatili in ilhuicac mochanecahuan ca noyollo ehua ompa nontlachia in monahuac in motloc tipalnemohua, ohuaya, ohuaya.

II. A Spring Song, an Otomi Song, a Plain Song.

1. I, the singer, have entered many flower gardens, places of pleasaunce, favored spots, where the dew spread out its glittering surface, where sang various lovely birds, where the coyol birds let fall their song, and spreading far around, their voices rejoiced the Cause of All, He who is God, ohuaya ! ohuaya !

2. It is there that I the singer hear the very essence of song ; certainly not on earth has true poesy its birth ; certainly it is within the heavens that one hears the lovely coyol bird lift its voice, that the various quechol and zacuan birds speak together, there they certainly praise the Cause of All, ohuaya ! ohuaya !

3. I, the singer, labor in spirit with what I heard, that it may lift up my memory, that it may go forth to those shining heavens, that my sighs may be borne on the wind and be permitted to enter where the yellow humming bird chants its praises in the heavens, ohuaya ! ohuaya !

4. And as in my thoughts I gaze around, truly no such sweet bird lifts its voice, truly the things made for the heavens by the Cause of All surpass all others, and unless my memory tends to things divine scarcely will it be possible to penetrate these and witness the wondrous sights in heaven, which rejoice the sweet heavenly birds before the face of the Cause of All.

5. How much, alas, shall I weep on earth ? Truly I have lived here in vain illusion ; I say that whatever is here on earth must end with our lives. May I be permitted to sing to thee, the Cause of All, there in the heaven, a dweller in thy mansion, there may my soul lift its voice and be seen with Thee and near Thee, Thou by whom we live, ohuaya ! ohuaya !

6. Ma xicaquin nocuic in tinocniuh xochihuehuetl inic tzotzonaya ilhuicacuicatl in nicehuaya, ic niquimellel-quixtia in teteucti, xochicueponi in noyollo izqui xochitl nictzetzelohuaya ic malitiuh in no cuicatzin ixpan in tloque in nahuaque, ohuaya, ohuaya.

---

III. Occe al mismo tono tlamelauhcaiyotl.

1. Xochicalco nihualcalaquia in nicuicani, oncan icac in chalchiuhuehuetl, oncan chialon ipalnemohuani in teteuctin xochitl tztzeluhtimani, tolquatectitla, xoyacaltitlan, onahuiaxtimani in xochicopal tlenamactli huel teyolquima, cahuia ca ihuintia in toyollo ixpan in tloque in nahuaque.

2. Ic motomá tocuic xochiahuia ca ihuinti in toyollo? Aoc ticmati inic nepapan xochicuicatl ic ticcecemeltia in tloque nahuaque quen ahtontlaelehuian; tinocniuh ma nohuehuetitlan ximoquetzaya nepapan xochitl ic ximopanaya chalchiuh ocoxochitl mocpac xicmanaya xicehuayan yectli yancuicatl ic me lelquixtia in tloque in nahuaque.

3. Tleymach tiquilnamiquia can mach in nemian moyollo ic timoyol cecenmanaya ahuicpa tichuica timoyol popoloaya in tlalticpac? Ca mach titlatiuh xihualmocuepaya xiccaquin yectli yancuicatl ximoyolciahuaya xochiaticaya onahuiaxtimani oncan nicehuaya in yectli yancuicatl nicuicani ic nicellelquixtia in tloque in nahuaque.

4. Xihuallachian tinocniuh in oncan icayan xochihuehuetl tonameyo ontotonauhtimani quetzal ecacehuaz-

6. List to my song, thou my friend, and to the flower-decked drum which kept time to the heavenly song which I sang, that I might make glad the nobles, raining down before them the flowery thoughts of my heart as though they were flowers, that my noble song might grow in glory before the face of the Cause of All, ohuaya ! ohuaya !

---

III. Another Plain Song, to the Same Tune.

1. I, the singer, entered into the house strewn with flowers, where stood upright the emerald drum, where awaiting the Giver of Life the nobles strewed flowers around, the place where the head is bowed for lustration, the house of corrupt odors, where the burning fragrant incense spreads and penetrates, intoxicating our souls in the presence of the Cause of All.

2. Where shall we obtain the fragrance which intoxicates our souls ? We do not yet know the various flower-songs with which we may rejoice the Cause of All, however desirous we are ; thou my friend, would that thou bring to my instrument various flowers, that thou shouldst clothe it in brilliant oco flowers, that thou shouldst offer them, and lift thy voice in a new and worthy song to rejoice the Cause of All.

3. Wherefore should we recall while the soul is in life that our souls must be scattered hither and thither, and that wherever we go we are to be destroyed on earth ? Rather let us hide it, turn from it, and listen to some worthy new song ; delight thy soul with the pervading fragrance of flowers, as I the singer lift my voice in a new song that I may rejoice the Cause of All.

4. Come hither, thou my friend, to where stands the drum, decked with flowers, gleaming with brightness, ticaya on xopaleuhtimani in oncan ic chialo ic malhuilo inipetl in icpal in tloque in nahuaque; xic cahuaya in mixtecomatla xihualmocuepaya tohuan, xic ehua in yancuicatl nicuicani ic niquellelquixtia in tloque in tla-neciz inic moyollo caltitlan.

5. Tleçannen in nicyocoya in nitlaocolcuica inic niquimilnamiqui in tepilhuan, in tlazomaquitzin, in tlazoteoxiuhme, in quetzaltotome, in moteyotico, in motleyotico in tlalticpac? in ocnoma caquizti inin tenyo, inin cahuanca, campa neltiazque? Ca zan titlacatico ca ompa huel tochan in canin ximoayan inocapa in yolihuayan aic tlamian.

green with the outspread plumes of the quetzal bird, where are looked for and cared for the seats near the Cause of All; leave the place of night and clouds, turn hither with us, lift thy voice in the new song I sing so that I may rejoice the Cause of All, as the dawn approaches in the house of thy heart.

5. Of what use is it that I frame my sad songs, that I recall to mind the youths, the beloved children, the precious relatives, the dear friends, famous and celebrated as they were on earth? Who now hears their fame, their deeds? Where can they find them? All of us are but mortal, and our home is there in the Hereafter, where there is life without end.

IV. Mexica otoncuicatl.

1. Nicchalchihutonameyopetlahuaya, nictzinitzcanihui-caloaya, niquilnamiquia nelhuayocuicatl, nic zacuan-huipanaya yectli yancuicatl nicuicani, nicchalchihutlazonenelo ic nichualnextia in xochicueponallotl ic nicellel-quixtia in floque in nahuaque.

2. Zacuantlazoihuiticaya tzinitzcan tlaunquechol ic nicyaimatia, nocuicatzin teocuitlatzitzilini nocuic nitoz; miahuatototl nocuica cahuantimania, nicehuaya xochitzetzelolpá ixpan in floque nahuaque.

3. Qualli cuicanelhuayotlo, teocuitlaquiquizcopa nicehuaya, ilhuicac cuicatl nictenquixtia, nitoz miahuatototl, chalchihutonameyotica, nicc̄ueponaltia yectli yancuicatl, nicehuaya xochitlenamaquilizticaya ic nitlaahuialia nicuicani ixpan in floque nahuaque.

4. Teoquecholme nechnananquilia in nicuicani coyolihahuacaya yectli yacuicatl, cozcāpetlaticaya chachalchihuetzalitztonameyo xopaleuhtimania xopan xochicuiatl onilhuica ahuiaxtimanio, xochiahuachtitlan nihualcuicaya nicuicani.

5. Nictlapalimatia nicxoxochineloaya yectli yancuicatl cozcāpetlaticaya, etc.

6. Nocontimaloaya nocontlamachtiao xochiteyolquima cuicatl poyomapoctli ic ye ahuiān ye noyollo, nihualyolcucuechahuaya, nicinecuia ahuiāca, xocomiqui in noyolia, nicinecuia yectliya xochitla netlamachtilyān, xochi ye ihuinti noyolia.

IV. An Otomi Song of the Mexicans.

1. I, the singer, polished my noble new song like a shining emerald, I arranged it like the voice of the tzinitzcan bird, I called to mind the essence of poetry, I set it in order like the chant of the zacuan bird, I mingled it with the beauty of the emerald, that I might make it appear like a rose bursting its bud, so that I might rejoice the Cause of All.

2. I skillfully arranged my song like the lovely feathers of the zacuan bird, the tzinitzcan and the quechol; I shall speak forth my song like the tinkling of golden bells; my song is that which the miaua bird pours forth around him; I lifted my voice and rained down flowers of speech before the face of the Cause of All.

3. In the true spirit of song I lifted my voice through a trumpet of gold, I let fall from my lips a celestial song, I shall speak notes precious and brilliant as those of the miaua bird, I shall cause to blossom out a noble new song, I lifted my voice like the burning incense of flowers, so that I the singer might cause joy before the face of the Cause of All.

4. The divine quechol bird answers me as I, the singer, sing, like the coyol bird, a noble new song, polished like a jewel, a turquoise, a shining emerald, darting green rays, a flower song of spring, spreading celestial fragrance, fresh with the dews of roses, thus have I the poet sung.

5. I colored with skill, I mingled choice roses in a noble new song, polished like a jewel, etc. (as in v. 4).

6. I was glorified, I was enriched, by the flower-sweet song as by the smoke of the poyomatl, my soul was contented, I trembled in spirit, I inhaled the sweetness, my soul was intoxicated, I inhaled the fragrance of delicious flowers in the place of riches, my soul was drunken with the flowers.

V. Otro Mexica tlamelauhcacuiçayotl.

1. Zanio in xochitl tonequimilol, zanio in cuicatl ic huehuetzi in teller in Dios ye mochan.

2. In mach noca ompolihuiz in cohuayotl mach noca in icniuhyotl in ononoya in ye ichan; ye nio Ioyontzin on cuicatillano ye ipalnemohuani.

3. Ma xiuhquechol xochi, zan in tzinitzcan malintoca zan miqui huaqui xochitl zan ic tonmoquimiloa can titlatoani ya ti Nezahualcoyotl.

4. Ma yan moyoliuh quimati in antepilhuan in anquauhtin amo celo ca mochipan titocnihuan, zancuel achic nican timochitonyazque o ye ichano.

5. Ca ye ompolihuiz in moteyo Nopiltzin, ti Tezozomoctli áca cá ye in mocuica? ayc a nihualchocao ca nihualicnotlamatica notia ye ichan.

6. An ca nihuallaocoya onicnotlamati ayo quico, ayoc quemanian, namech aitlaquih in tlalticpac y icanontia ye ichan.

V. Another Plain Song of the Mexicans.

1. I alone will clothe thee with flowers, mine alone is the song which casts down our grief before God in thy house.

2. True it is that my possessions shall perish, my friendships, their home and their house; thus I, O Yoyontzin, pour forth songs to the Giver of Life.

3. Let the green quechol birds, let the tzinitzcan twine flowers for us, only dying and withered flowers, that we may clothe thee with flowers, thou ruler, thou Nezahualcoyotl.

4. Ye youths and ye braves, skilled in wisdom, may you alone be our friends, while for a moment here we shall enjoy this house.

5. For thy fame shall perish, Nopiltzin, and thou, Tezozomoc, where are thy songs? No more do I cry aloud, but rest tranquil that ye have gone to your homes.

6. Ye whom I bewailed, I know nevermore, never again; I am sad here on earth that ye have gone to your homes.

VI. Otro chal cayotl, canto de Tetzlepan Quetzanitzin.

1. Aua nocnihue ninentlamatia zan ninochoquilia in monahuac aya yehuan Dios, quexquich onmitzicnotlamachtia momacehual cemamanahuac ontonitlanililo in ic tontlahuica tontecemilhuiltia in tlalticpac.

2. Macazo tleon xoconyoyocoya ti noyollo, yehua cuix ic nepohualoyan in oncan nemohua yehua, in atle tlahuelli in antecocolia huel on yecnemiz in tlalticpac.

3. In quimati noyollo nichoca yehua huel eza ye nelli in titicnihuan, huellenelli nemoa in tlalticpac in tonicniuh tlatzihuiz yehuan Dios.

4. Xontlachayan huitztlampayan, iquizayan in tonatiuh, ximoyollehuayan oncan manian teoatl tlachinolli, oncan mocuica in teucyotl in tlatocayotl yectliya xochitl in amo zannen mocuia, in quetzallalpilo niaya macquauhtica, chimaltica neicaloloyan in tlalticpac ic momacehuaya in yectliya xochitl in tiquelehuia in ticnequia in tinocniuh in quitemacehualtia in quitenemactia in floque in nahuaque.

5. Nentiquelehuia in tictemoaya in tinocniuh yectliya xochitl can ticuiz intlacamo ximicaliya, melchiquiuhcicaya, mitonalticaya ticmacehuaya in yectliyaxochitla, yaochoquiztli ixayoticaya in quitemacehualtica in floque in nahuaque.

VI. Another Chalco-song, a Poem of Tellepan Quetzanitzin.

1. Alas, my friend, I was afflicted, I cried aloud on thy account to God. How much compassion hast thou for thy servant in this world sent here by thee to be thy subject for the space of a day on this earth!

2. However that may be, mayst thou so dispose my heart, that it may pass through this place of reckoning, without anger, without injury, and live a good life on earth.

3. My heart knows how truly I weep for my friend, how truly as it lives on earth it cries aloud for thee, my friend, to God.

4. Let thy soul awake and turn toward the south, toward the rising of the sun, rouse thy heart that it turn toward the field of battle, there let it win power and fame, the noble flowers which it will not grasp in vain; adorned with a frontlet of quetzal feathers I went forth armed with sword and shield to the battlefield on earth, that I might merit these noble flowers with which we may rejoice as we wish our friends, as the Cause of All may reward and grant to us.

5. Vainly, O friends, do we desire and seek where we may cull those noble flowers unless we fight with bared breasts, with the sweat of the brow, meriting these noble flowers, in bitter and painful war, for which the Cause of All will give reward.

VII. Otro.

1. Tleinmach oamaxque on in antocnihuan in an Chia-paneca Otomi, omachamelelacic: in ic oamihuintiqueo octicatl in oanquique ic oamihuintique, xicualcuican, in amo ma in anhuehuetztoqueo, ximozcalicano in antocnihuan nipatiazque in tochano, xopantlalpan ye nican, ma quiza in amihuintiliz, on xitlachiacano ohuican ye anmaquia, O!

2. Ca yeppa yuhqui in tizaoctli in tlalticpac, quitemacahuican ic tecalaquiao teoatl tlachinolli quitoao texaxamatzaotopopoloao on canin xaxamanio in tlazochalchihiuitl, in teoxihuitl, in maquitztl tlazotetl in tepilhuan in coninio in xochitizaoctlio cucl can in antocnihuan in tonicahuacao.

3. Ma ye ticiti in xochitlalpan in tochan xochitlalticpac-ilhuicacpaco in huel ic xochiamemeyallotl on ahuiaxtimani, teyolquima yoliliz ahuach xochitl in tochan in Chiappan, oncan timalolo in teucyotl in tlatocayotl in chimalxochitl oncuepontimani tonacatlalpan.

4. Quemach in amo antlacaquio in antocnihuan tohuiano xicahuacano, in tizaoctlio teotlachinolotli; ma ye ticiti in ompa tinectilo in tochan xochiahuachotli, zan ic ahuiaca ihuinti in toyollo, tetlamachtio teyolquimao tixochiachichinatihui netlamachtilyan in toquizayan xochitlalpan tonacatlalpan: tlemach oamaxqueo? xichualcaquican in tocuic in tamocnihuan, etc.

VII. Another.

1. What have you done, O you our friends, you Chiapanecs and Otomis, why have you grieved, that you were drunken with the wine which you took, that you were drunken? Come hither and sing; do not lie stretched out; arise, O friends, let us go to our houses here in this land of spring; come forth from your drunkenness, see in what a difficult place you must take it.

2. For formerly it was so on earth that the white wine was taken in difficult places, as on entering the battlefield, or, as it was said, where the stones were broken and destroyed, where were broken into fragments the lovely emeralds, the turquoises, the honored precious stones, the youths, the children; therefore take the flowery white wine, O friends and brothers.

3. Let us drink it in the flowery land, in our dwelling surrounded by the flowery earth and sky, where the fountains of the flowers send their sweetness abroad; the delicious breath of the dewy flowers is in our homes in Chiapas; there nobility and power make them glorious, and the war-flowers bloom over a fertile land.

4. Is it possible, oh friends, that you do not hear us? Let us go, let us go, let us pour forth the white wine, the wine of battle; let us drink where the wine sweet as the dew of roses is set forth in our houses, let our souls be intoxicated with its sweetness; enriched, steeped in delight, we shall soak up the water of the flowers in the place of riches, going forth to a land of flowers, a fertile spot. What have you done? Come hither and listen to our songs, O friends.

VIII. Otro, Queuh ce tlatohuani in quimilnamiqui in tlatoque.

1. Tlaocolxochi ixayoticaya ic nichuipana in nocuic nicuicani, niquimilnamiqui in tepilhuan, in teintoque, in tlaçõtitoque in campa in ximohuaya, in oteuctico, in otlatocatico in tlallia icpac, in quetzalhuahuaciuhthoque in chalchiuhteintoque in tepilhuan, in maoc imixpan in maoc oquitlani; in ye itto in tlalticpac iximachoca in tloque in nahuaque.

2. Y yo ya hue nitlaocolcuicaya in niquimilnamiqui in tepilhuan, ma zan itla ninocuepa, ma niquimonana, ma niquinhualquixti in ompa in ximoayan, ma oc oppa tihua in tlalticpac, ma oc quimahuizoqui in tepilhuan in ticmahuizoa, azo huel yehuantin tlatlazomahuizozquia in ipalnemohualoni, quemmach tomazehual in tlazaniuh ticmatican in ticnopillahueliloque ic choca in noyollo nino tlalnamiquiliz huipana in nicuicani choquiztica tlaocoltica nitlalnamiquia.

3. Manozo zan nicmati in nechcaquizque intla itla yectli cuicatl niquimehuili in ompa ximohuayan, ma ic niquipapacti, ma ic niquimacotlaza inin tonez inin chichinaquiliz in tepilhuan. Cuix on machiaz? Quennel niहुल nellaquahua? Aquen manian ompa niquimontocaz? Ano niquin nonotztaciz in ye yuh quin in tlalticpac.

VIII. Composed by a Certain Ruler in Memory of Former Rulers.

1. Weeping, I, the singer, weave my song of flowers of sadness; I call to memory the youths, the shards, the fragments, gone to the land of the dead; once noble and powerful here on earth, the youths were dried up like feathers, were split into fragments like an emerald, before the face and in the sight of those who saw them on earth, and with the knowledge of the Cause of All.

2. Alas! alas! I sing in grief as I recall the children. Would that I could turn back again; would that I could grasp their hands once more; would that I could call them forth from the land of the dead; would that we could bring them again on earth, that they might rejoice and we rejoice, and that they might rejoice and delight the Giver of Life; is it possible that we His servants should reject him or should be ungrateful? Thus I weep in my heart as I, the singer, review my memories, recalling things sad and grievous.

3. Would only that I knew they could hear me, there in the land of the dead, were I to sing some worthy song. Would that I could gladden them, that I could console the suffering and the torment of the children. How can it be learned? Whence can I draw the inspiration? They are not where I may follow them; neither can I reach them with my calling as one here on earth.

IX. Otro Tlaocolcuica Otomiltl.

1. In titloque in tinahuaque nimitzontlaocolnonotzaya, nelcicihuiliz mixpantzinco noconiyahuaya, ninentlamati in tlalticpac ye nican nitlatematia, ninotolinia, in ayc onotechacic in pactli, in necuiltonolli ye nican; tlezannen naicoyc amo y mochiuhyan, tlaazo atle nican xotlacueponi in nentlamachtillia, tlaazo zan ihuian in motloc in monahuac; Macuelehuatl ma xicmonequilti ma monahuactzinco oc ehuiti in noyolia, ninixayohuatzaz in motloc monahuac tipalnemohuani.

2. Quemachamiqueo in motimalotinemi co y in tlalticpac in ayac contenmatio in atlamachilizneque o tlaazo can moztla cahuia on in amitztenmati in titloque in tinahuaque inic momatio ca mochipa tlalticpac, nemizqueo ninotlamatli motlaliao niquimittao, tlaazo mixitl tlapatl oquiqueo ic nihualnelaquahua in ninotolinia o tlaazo ompa in ximohuayan neittotiu o, cazo tiquenamiqueo quinquac ye pachihuiz ye teyolloa.

3. Ma cayac quen quichiuhaya in iyollo in tlalticpac ye nican in titlaocaxtinemi in tichocatinemia, ca zacuel achic ontlanii zoo, tlaazo zan tontlatocatihuio in yuho otlatocatque tepilhuan, ma ic ximixcuiti in tinocniuh in atonahuia in atihuelamati in tlalticpac o; ma oc ye ximāpana in tlaocolxochitl, choquixxochitl, xoyocatimalo o xochielcicihuilztlío in ihuicpa toconiyahuazon in tloque in nahuaque.

4. Ica ye ninapanao tlaocolxochicozcatlon, nomac ommanian elcicihuilizchimālxochitlon, nic ehuya in tlaocolcuicatloo, nicchalchiuhcocahuicomana yectli yancuicatl, nic ahuachxochilacatzoa, yn o chalchiuhhuehuhilhuitl, itech nictlaxilotia in nocuicatzin in nicuicani ye niquincuilia in ilhuicac chanequeo zacuantototl, quetzaltzinzincantototl teoquechol inon tlātoa quechol in qui cecemeltia in tloque, etc.

IX. An Otomi Song of Sadness.

1. To thee, the Cause of All, to thee I cried out in sadness, my sighs rose up before thy face; I am afflicted here on earth, I suffer, I am wretched, never has joy been my lot, never good fortune; my labor has been of no avail, certainly nothing here lessens one's suffering; truly only to be with thee, near thee; may it be thy will that my soul shall rise to thee, may I pour out my tears to thee, before thee, O thou Giver of Life.

2. Happy are those who walk in thy favor here on earth, who never neglect to offer up praise, nor, leaving till to-morrow, neglect thee, thou Cause of All, that thou mayest be known in all the earth; I know that they shall live, I see that they are established, certainly they have drunk to forgetfulness while I am miserable, certainly I shall go to see the land of the dead, certainly we shall meet where all souls are contented.

3. Never were any troubled in spirit on the earth who appealed to thee, who cried to thee, only for an instant were they cast down, truly thou caused them to rule as they ruled before: Take as an example on earth, O friend, the fever-stricken patient; clothe thyself in the flowers of sadness, in the flowers of weeping, give praises in flowers of sighs that may carry you toward the Cause of All.

4. I array myself with the jewels of saddest flowers; in my hands are the weeping flowers of war; I lift my voice in sad songs; I offer a new and worthy song which is beautiful and melodious; I weave songs fresh as the dew of flowers; on my drum decked with precious stones and plumes I, the singer, keep time to my song, as I take it from those dwellers in the heavens, the zacuan bird, the beautiful tzinitzcan, the divine quechol, those melodious birds who give joy to the Cause of All.

X. Mexica xopancuicatl tlamelauhcayotl.

1. Tlaocoya in noyollo nicuicanitl nicnotlamatia, yehua za yey xochitl y zan ye in cuicatlin, ica nitlacocoa in tlalticpac ye nican, ma nequitocan intech cocolia intech miquitlani moch ompa onyazque cano y ichan, ohuaya.

2. I inquemanian in otonciahuic, in otontlatzihuic tocon ynayaz in momahuizco in motenyo in tlalticpac, ma nenquitocane, ohuaya, etc.

3. Inin azan oc huelnemohuan in tlalticpac mazano ihuan yehuan Dios quiniquac onnetemoloa in tiaque in canin ye ichan, ohuaya.

4. Hu inin titotolinia ma yuhquitimiquican ma omochiuh in mantech onittocan in tocnihuan in matech onahuacan in quauhtin y a ocelotl.

5. Mazo quiyocoli macaoc xictemachican, can antlahuicaya y caya amechmotlatili in ipalnemohuani, ohuaya.

6. Ay ya yo xicnotlamatican Tezcacoacatl, Atecpanecatl mach nel amihuihuinti in cozcatl in chalchihuitli, ma ye anmonecti, ma ye antlaneltocati.

X. A Spring Song of the Mexicans, a Plain Song.

1. My heart grieved, I, the singer, was afflicted, that these are the only flowers, the only songs which I can procure here on earth ; see how they speak of sickness and of death, how all go there to their homes, alas.

2. Sometimes thou hast toiled and acquired skill, thou takest refuge in thy fame and renown on earth ; but see how vain they speak, alas.

3. As many as live on earth, truly they go to God when they descend to the place where are their homes, alas.

4. Alas, we miserable ones, may it happen when we die that we may see our friends, that we may be with them in grandeur and strength.

5. Although He is the Creator, do not hope that the Giver of Life has sent you and has established you.

6. Be ye grieved, ye of Tezcuco and Atecpan, that ye are intoxicated with gems and precious stones ; come forth to the light, come and believe.

XI. Otro.

1. Nicchocaehua, nicnotlamati, nicelnamiqui ticauchtehuazque yectliya xochitl yectli yancuicatl; ma oc tonahuiacan, ma oc toncuicacan cen tiyahui tipolihui ye ichan, etc.

2. Achtleon ah yuhquimati in tocnihuan cocoya in noyollo qualani yehua ay oppan in tlacatihua ye ay oppa piltihuaye yece yequi xoantlalticpac.

3. Oc achintzinca y tetloc ye nican tenahuacan aic yezco on aic nahuiaz aic nihuelamatiz.

4. In can on nemian noyollo yehua? Can huel ye nochan? Can huel nocallamanian? Ninotolinia tlalticpac.

5. Zan ye tocontemaca ye tocontotoma in mochalchiuh, ye on quetzalimalintoc, zacuan icpac xochitl, za yan tiquinmacayan tepilhuan O.

6. In nepapan xochitl conquimilo, conihuiti ye noyollo niman nichocaya ixpan niah in tonan.

7. Zan nocolhuia: ipalnemohua ma ca ximozoma, ma ca ximonenequin tlalticpac, mazo tehuantin motloc tinemican y, zan ca ye moch ana ilhuicatlitica.

8. Azo tle nello nicyaitohua nican ipalnemohua, zan tontemiqui y, zan toncochitlehuaco, nicitoa in tlalticpac ye ayac huel tontiquilhuia ye nicana.

9. In manel ye chalchihuitl, mantlamatilolli, on aya mazo ya ipalnemohuani ayac hueltic ilhuia nicana.

XI. Another.

1. I lift my voice in wailing, I am afflicted, as I remember that we must leave the beautiful flowers, the noble songs; let us enjoy ourselves for a while, let us sing, for we must depart forever, we are to be destroyed in our dwelling place.

2. Is it indeed known to our friends how it pains and angers me that never again can they be born, never again be young on this earth?

3. Yet a little while with them here, then nevermore shall I be with them, nevermore enjoy them, nevermore know them.

4. Where shall my soul dwell? Where is my home? Where shall be my house? I am miserable on earth.

5. We take, we unwind the jewels, the blue flowers are woven over the yellow ones, that we may give them to the children.

6. Let my soul be draped in various flowers; let it be intoxicated by them, for soon must I weeping go before the face of our mother.

7. This only do I ask:—Thou Giver of Life, be not angry, be not severe on earth, let us live with thee on earth, take us to the Heavens.

8. But what can I speak truly here of the Giver of Life? We only dream, we are plunged in sleep; I speak here on earth; but never can we speak in worthy terms here.

9. Although it may be jewels and precious ointments (of speech), yet of the Giver of Life, one can never here speak in worthy terms.

XII. Xopancuicatl nenonotzalcuicatl ipampa in aunque amo on mixtilia in yaoc.

1. Nictzotzonan nohuehueuh nicuicatlamatquetl ic niquimonixitia ic niquimitlehua in tocnihuan in atle in yollo quimati in aic tlathui ipan inin yollo yaocochmic-toque in inpan motimaloa in mixtecomatlayohualli anen niquito huay motolinia y, maquicaqui qui y xochitlathui-cacuicatl occeh tzetzeuhtimania huehuetitlana, ohuaya, ohuai.

2. Tlahuizcalteochitla oncuepontimani in ixochiquiya-opan in tloque in nahuaque, onahuachtotonameyotimani in teyolquima; ma xiqualitacan in atle ipan ontlatao, zannen cuepontimanio ayac mahaca quelehuiao in antocnihuan amo zannen ya xochitl yoliliztlapalneucxochitla e.

3. Quiyolcailhuintiaya in teyolia, zan oncan ye omania, zan oncan ye oncuepontimania quauhtepetitlan in ya hualihcancopa y ixtlahuatlitica oncan inemaya oc teoatl tlachinolli a. Oncan in epoyahuayan in teoquauhtli oncan iquiquinacayan, in ocelotl, ipixauhyān in nepapan tlazomaquiztetl, in emomolotzayan in nepapan tlazopili-huitl, oncan teintoque oncan xamantoque in tepilhuan.

4. Tlacuah yehuantin in tepilhuanī conelehuiao, in tlahuizcalxochitlan ya nemamallihuao ic tetlanēnectiao, in ilhuicac oncon iceolitzin yn iotepiltzina quitzetzelotimānio a in tepilhuan in quauhtliya ocelotl, in quime-mactiao in xochicueponalotlon in quimihuintia yeyol-xochiahuechtliā.

5. In ic timomatia in tinocniuh zan ne yan xochitlon in tiquelehuiaon in tlalticpac, quen toconcuizon quen ticyachihuazon, timotolinia in tiquimiztlacoa a in tepilhuan xochitica cuicatica; ma xihuallachican in atle y ica mitl, ehuaon zan moch yehuantin in tepilhuan zacuanme-

XII. A Spring Song, a Song of Exhortation, Because Certain Ones did not go to the War.

1. I strike on my drum, I the skillful singer, that I may arouse, that I may fire our friends, who think of nothing, to whose minds plunged in sleep the dawn has not appeared, over whom are yet spread the dark clouds of night; may I not call in vain and poorly, may they hear this song of the rosy dawn, poured abroad widely by the drum, oh! oh!

2. The divine flowers of dawn blossom forth, the war flowers of the Cause of All; glittering with dew they scatter abroad their fragrance; bring them hither that they be not hidden nor bloom in vain, that they may rejoice you our friends, and not in vain shall be the flowers, the living, colored, brilliant flowers.

3. They intoxicate the soul, but they are only found, they blossom only on the lofty mountains, on the broad plains where glorious war finds its home. There is where the eagles gather in bands of sixties, there the tigers roar, there the various beloved stones rain down, there the various dear children are cut to pieces; there the youths are split into shards and ground into fragments.

4. Stoutly do those youths rejoice, laboring for the rose of the dawn that they may win it; and in heaven, He, the only one, the noble one, pours down upon the youths strength and courage, that they may pluck the budding flowers of the pathway, that they may be intoxicated with the dew-damp flowers of the spirit.

5. Know, my friend, that these are the only flowers which will give thee pleasure on earth; mayest thou take them and make them; O poor one, search out for thy children these flowers and songs. Look not hither without arrows, let all the youths lift up their voices, like teoquecholtitzinitzcatlatlahuecholtin moyeh yectitinemio in onmatio in ixtlahuatlitican.

6. Chimalxochitl, quauhpilolxochitl ic oquichtlamatimani in y antepilhuan xochicozcaocoxochitl ic mapantimanian, quitimaloao yectliya cuicatl, yectliya xochitl, imezo imelchiquiuh patiuh mochiuaya in quicelia on in teotl tlachinolli; y iantocnihuan tliliuhquitepeca in tiyaotehua huey otlipana, ma huel xoconmanao y ye mochimalo, huel xonicaon in ti quauhtliya ocelotla.

---

XIII. Huexotzincayotl.

1. Zan tlaocolxochitl, tlaocolcuicatl on mania Mexico nican ha in Tlatilolco, in yece ye oncan on neiximachoyan, ohuaya.

2. Ixamayo yectli in zan ca otitech icneli ipalnemohuani, in za can tipopolihuizque in timacehualta, ohuaya.

3. Ototlahueliltic, zan titotolinia timacehualtinquezo huel tehuantin, otiquittaque in cococ ye machoyan, ohuaya.

4. Ticmomoyahua, ticxoxocoyan in momacehualy in Tlatilolco cococ moteca cococ ye machoyan ye ic ticiahua ipalnemoani, ohuaya.

5. Choquiztli moteca ixayotl pixahui oncan a in Tlatilolco; in atlan yahqueon o in Mexica ye cihua nelihui ica yehuilo a oncan ontihui in tocnihuan a, ohuaya.

zacuan birds, divine quechols, tzinitzcans, and red quechols, who live joyous lives, and know the fields.

6. O youths, here there are skilled men in the flowers of shields, in the flowers of the pendant eagle plumes, the yellow flowers which they grasp; they pour forth noble songs, noble flowers; they make payment with their blood, with their bare breasts; they seek the bloody field of war. And you, O friends, put on your black paint, for war, for the path of victory; let us lay hands on our shields, and raise aloft our strength and courage.

---

XIII. A Song of Huexotzinco.

1. Only sad flowers, sad songs, are here in Mexico, in Tlatilolco, in this place these alone are known, alas.

2. It is well to know these, if only we may please the Giver of Life, lest we be destroyed, we his subjects, alas.

3. We have angered Him, we are only wretched beings, slaves by blood; we have seen and known affliction, alas.

4. We are disturbed, we are embittered, thy servants here in Tlatilolco, deprived of food, made acquainted with affliction, we are fatigued with labor, O Giver of Life, alas.

5. Weeping is with us, tears fall like rain, here in Tlatilolco; as the Mexican women go down to the water, we beg of them for ourselves and our friends, alas.

6. In ic neltic o ya cahua Atloyantepetl o in Mexico in poctli ehuatoc ayahuítl onmantoc, in tocon ya chihuaya ipalnemoani, ohuaya.

7. In an Mexica ma xiquilnamiquican o yan zan topan quitemohuia y ellelon i mahuizo yehuan zan yehuan Dios, yehua anquin ye oncan in coyonacazco, ohuaya.

8. Za can ye oncan zan quinchoquiz tlapaloa o anqui-huitzmanatl incan yeŭch motelchiuh on ya o anquin ye mochin, ha in tlayotlaqui, ah in tlacotzin, ah in tlacateuctli in oquichtzin y huihui ica ça ye con yacauhqui in Tenochtitlan, ohuaya.

9. In antocnihuan ma xachocacan aya ma xăconmatican ica ye ticcauhque Mexicayotl huiya, zan ye yatl chichixhuiya no zan ye tlaqualli chichixaya zan con aya chiuhqui in ipalnemoani ha in Tlatilolco y, ohuaya.

10. Tel ah zan yhuian huicoque hon in motelchiuhtzin ha in tlacotzin zan mocuica ellaquauhque ac achinanco in ahiquac in tlepan quixtiloto in coyohuacan, ohuaya.

6. Even as the smoke, rising, lies in a cloud over Mount Atloyan, in Mexico, so does it happen unto us, O Giver of Life, alas.

7. And you Mexicans, may you remember concerning us when you descend and suffer before the majesty of God, when there you shall howl like wolves.

8. There, there will be only weeping as your greeting when you come, there you will be accursed, all of you, workers in filth, slaves, rulers or warriors, and thus Tenochtitlan will be deserted.

9. Oh friends, do not weep, but know that sometime we shall have left behind us the things of Mexico, and then their water shall be made bitter and their food shall be made bitter, here in Tlatilolco, as never before, by the Giver of Life.

10. The disdained and the slaves shall go forth with song; but in a little while their oppressors shall be seen in the fire, amid the howling of wolves.

XIV.

1. Zan tzinitzcan impetlatl ipan, ohuaya ; on tzinitzcan iceliztocha oncan izan in ninentlamatia, in zan icnoxochicuicatica inocon ya temohua ya ohuaya, ohuaya.

2. In canin nemiya icanon in nemitoconchia ye nican huehuetitlan a ayiahue, ye onnentlamacho, ye mocatlao-coyalo ay xopancaliteca, ohuaya, ohuaya.

3. Ac ipiltzin ? Achanca ipiltzin yehuayan Dios Jesu Christo can quicuilo antlacuiloa quicuilo ancuicatl a ohuaya, ohuaya.

4. O achan canel ompa huiz canin ilhuicac y xochintlacuilol xochincalitec a ohuaya ohuaya.

5. In ma ontlachialoya in ma ontlätlamahuicolo in tlapapalcalimanican y ipalnemoa y tlayocol yehuan Dios, ohuaya.

6. Techtolinian techtlätlanectia y icuicaxochiamilpan, intechontlätlachialtian ipalnmohua itlayocol yehuan Dios a ohuaya.

7. Ya ixopantla ixopantlatinenemi ye nican ixtlahuatl yteey, za xiuhquechol quiahuitl zan topan xaxamacay in atlixco ya ohuaya, ohuaya.

8. Zan ye nauhcampay ontlapepetlantoc, oncan onceliztoc in cozauihxochitl, oncan nemi in Mexica in tepilhuan a ohuaya ohuaya.

XIV.

1. Only the tzinitzcan is in power, the tzinitzcan arouses me in my affliction, letting fall its songs like sad flowers.

2. Wherever it wanders, wherever it lives, one awaits it here with the drum, in affliction, in distress, here in the house of spring.

3. Who is the royal son? Is not the royal son, the son of God, Jesus Christ, as was written in your writings, as was written in your songs?

4. Is not the flowery writing within the house of flowers that he shall come there from heaven?

5. Look around and wonder at this scene of many colored houses which God has created and endowed with life.

6. They make us who are miserable to see the light among the flowers and songs of the fertile fields, they cause us to see those things which God has created and endowed with life.

7. They dwell in the place of spring, in the place of spring, here within the broad fields, and only for our sakes does the turquoise-water fall in broken drops on the surface of the lake.

8. Where it gleams forth in fourfold rays, where the fragrant yellow flowers bud, there live the Mexicans, the youths.

XV. Tezozomocitli ic motecpac.

1. Zan ca tzihuactitlan, mizquititlan, aiyahue Chico-moztocpa, mochi ompa yahuitze antlātohuan ye nican, ohuaya, ohuaya.

2. Nican momalinaco in colcahuahtecpillotl huiya nican milacatzoa in Colhuaca Chichimecayotl in toteuchuahua.

3. Ma oc achitzinca xomotlanecuican antepilhuan huiya tlacateuhtzin Huitzilihuitl a ya cihuacoatl y Quauhxilotl huia totomihuacan Tlalnahuacatl aya zan ca xiuhtototl Ixtlilxochitl y quenman tlatzihuiz quimohmo-yahuaquih yauh y tepeuh yehuan Dios ica ye choca Tezozomocitli ohuaya ohuaya.

4. Yenoceppa mizquitl yacahuantimani Hueytlalpani, anquican itlatol yehuan Dios a ohuaya, ohuaya.

5. Can onyeyauh xochitl, can oyeyauh yeh intoca quauhtli ocelotl huia ya moyahuaya xelihuia Atloyantepetl Hueytlalpan y anquizan itlatol ipalnemohua ohuaya ohuaya.

6. Oncuiltonoloc, on'echtlachtiloc, in teteuctin cemanahuac y huel zotoca huipantoca y tlātōl ipalnemohuani, huel quimothuitico, huel quiximatico y yollo yehuan Dios huiya chalchihuitl maquiztliya tlamatelolliya tizatla ihuitla za xochitl quimatico yaoyotla ohuaya ohuaya.

7. Oya in Tochin y miec acalcatli, Acolmiztlan teuctli zan Catocih teuctli Yohuallatonoc y yehuan Cuetzpaltzin Iztaccoyotl totomihuacan Tlaxcallan ohuaye Coatzi-teuctli Huītlalotzin za xochitl quimatico yaoyotla ohuaya ohuaya.

XV. The Reign of Tezozomocli.

1. From the land of the tzihuac bushes, from the land of the mezquite bushes, where was ancient Chicomoztoc, thence came all your rulers hither.

2. Here unrolled itself the royal line of Colhuacan, here our nobles of Colhuacan, united with the Chichimecs.

3. Sing for a little while concerning these, O children, the sovereign Huitzilihuitl, the judge Quauhxilotl, of our bold leader Tlalnahuacatl, of the proud bird Ixtlilxochitl, those who went forth, and conquered and ruled before God, and bewail Tezozomocli.

4. A second time they left the mezquite bushes in Hue Talpan, obeying the order of God.

5. They go where are the flowers, where they may gain grandeur and power, dividing asunder they leave the mountain Atloyan and Hue Talpan, obeying the order of the Giver of Life.

6. It is cause of rejoicing, that I am enabled to see our rulers from all parts gathering together, arranging in order the words of the Giver of Life, and that their souls are caused to see and to know that God is precious, wonderful, a sweet ointment, and that they are known as flowers of wise counsel in the affairs of war.

7. There were Tochin, with many boats, the noble Acolmiztlan, the noble Catocih, Yohuallatonoc, and Cuetzpaltzin, and Iztaccoyotl, bold leaders from Tlaxcalla, and Coatziteuctli, and Huitlalotzin, famed as flowers on the field of battle.

8. Tley an quiyocoya anteteuctin y Huexotzinca? ma xontlachiacan Acolihuācan in quatlapanca oncan ye Huexotla itztapallocan huia yeyahuatimani Atloyantepetl a ohuaya.

9. Oncan in pochotl ahuehuetl oncan icaca mizquitl ye oztotlhuiā tetlaquahuac quimatia ipalnemohuani oyao ai ya hue ohuaya.

10. Tlacateotl nopiltzin Chichimecatl y tleonmach itla techcocolia Tezozomoctli tech in micitlani ye ehuaya atayahuili quinequia yaoyotl necaliztlon quima Acolhuacan ohuaya.

11. Tel ca tonehua ticahuiltia ipalnemohuani Colihua o o Mexicatl y tlacateotl huiaya atayahuili quinequia yaoyotl necaliztl qui mana Acolhuacan a ohuaya ohuaya.

12. Zan ye on necuiltonolo in tlalticpac ay oppan titlano chimalli xochitl ay oppan ahuiltlon ipalnemohua; ye ic anauia in tlailotlaqui xayacamacha huia ho ay ya yi ee ohuaya ha ohuaya.

13. Inacon anquelehuia chimalli xochitl y yohual xochitli tlāchinol xochitl; ye ic neyahpanalo antepilhuan huiya Quetzalmamatzin Huitznahuacatl ohuaye ho ha yia yi ee oua yi aha ohuaya.

14. Chimal tenamitl oncan in nemohua yehua necalia huilotl oyahualla icahuaca yehuaya on canin ye nemi in tepipiltin Xiuhztzin xayacamachani amehuano o anconahuiltia ipalnemohua ohuaya.

15. In ma huel netotilo mannemamanaloya yaonahuac a on netlamachtilyan ipan nechihuallano ohuaye in tepiltzin can ye mocuetlaca ohuaya, ohuaya.

8. For what purpose do you make your rulers, men of Huexotzinco? Look at Acolhuacan where the men of Huexotzinco are broken with toil, are trod upon like paving stones, and wander around the mountain Atloyan.

9. There is a ceiba tree, a cypress tree, there stands a mezquite bush, strong as a cavern of stone, known as the Giver of Life.

10. Ruler of men, Nopiltzin, Chicimec, O Tezozomoc-tli, why hast thou made us sick, why brought us to death, through not desiring to offer war and battle to Acolhuacan?

11. But we lift up our voice and rejoice in the Giver of life; the men of Colhuacan and the Mexican leader have ruined us, through not desiring to offer war and battle to Acolhuacan.

12. The only joy on earth will be again to send the shield-flower, again to rejoice the Giver of Life; already are discontented the faces of the workers in filth.

13. Therefore you rejoice in the shield-flowers, the flowers of night, the flowers of battle; already are ye clothed, ye children of Quetzalmamatzin and Huitznahuacatl.

14. Your shield and your wall of safety are where dwells the sweet joy of war, where it comes, and sings and lifts its voice, where dwell the nobles, the precious stones, making known their faces; thus you give joy to the Giver of Life.

15. Let your dancing, and banqueting be in the battle, there be your place of gain, your scene of action, where the noble youths perish.

16. Quetzalipantica oyo huiloa ahuiltiloni ipalnemohuan yectlahuacan in tapalcayocan a ohuaya ohuaya.

17. Oyo hualehuaya ye tocalipan oyohua yehua Huexotzincatl y tototihua o o Iztaccoyotla ohuaya ohuaya.

18. Ace melle ica tonācoquiza y nican topantilemonti Tlaxcaltecatl itocoya cacalia in altepetl y Huexochinco ya ohuaya.

19. Cauhtimanizo polihuiz tlalli yan totomihuacan huia cehuiz yiollo o antepilhuan a Huexotzinca y ohuaya ohuaya.

20. Mizquitl y mancan tzihuactli y mancan ahuehuetl onicacahuia ipalnemohua, xonicnotlamati mochi elimanca Huexotzinco ya zanio oncan in huel on mani tlalla ohuaya ohuaya.

21. Zan nohuian tlaxixinia tlamomoyahua y ayoc anmocehuia momācehual y hualcaco mocuic in icelteotl oc xoconyocoyacan antepilhuan a ohuaya ohuaya.

22. Zan mocuepa itlatol conahuiloa ipalnemohua Tepeyacac ohuaye antepilhuan ohuaya ohuaya.

23. Canel amonyazque xoconmolhuican an Tlaxcalteca y Tlacomihuatzin hui oc oyauh itlachinol ya yehuan Dios a ohuaya.

24. Cozcatl ihuihui quetzal nēhuihuia oc zo conhui-panque zan Chichimeca y Totomihua a Iztaccoyotl a ohuaya ohuaya.

25. Huexotzinco ya zan quiauhtzinteuctli techcocolia Mexicatl itechcocolia Acolihuiao ach quennelotihua tonyazque quenonamican a ohuaye ohuaye.

16. Dressed in their feathers they go rejoicing the Giver of Life to the excellent place, the place of shards.

17. He lifted up his voice in our houses like a bird, that man of Huexotzinco, Iztaccoyotl.

18. Whoever is aggrieved let him come forth with us against the men of Tlaxcallan, let him follow where the city of Huexotzinco lets drive its arrows.

19. Our leaders will lay waste, they will destroy the land, and your children, O Huexotzincos, will have peace of mind.

20. The mezquite was there, the tzihuac was there, the Giver of Life has set up the cypress; be sad that evil has befallen Huexotzinco, that it stands alone in the land.

21. In all parts there are destruction and desolation, no longer are there protection and safety, nor has the one only God heard the song; therefore speak it again, you children;

22. That the words may be repeated, you children, and give joy to the Giver of Life at Tepeyacan.

23. And since you are going, you Tlaxcallans, call upon Tlacomihuatzin that he may yet go to this divine war.

24. The Chichimecs and the leaders and Iztaccoyotl have with difficulty and vain labor arranged and set in order their jewels and feathers.

25. At Huexotzinco the ruler Quiauhtzin hates the Mexicans, hates the Acolhuacans; when shall we go to mix with them, to meet them?

26. Ay antlayocoya anquimitoa in amotahuan an teteuctin ayoquantzin ihuan a in tlepetztic in cacha ohuaya tzihuacpopoca yo huaya.

27. Ca zan catcan Chalco Acolihuaca huia totomihua-can y amilpan in Quauhquecholla quixixinia in ipetl icpal yehuan Dios ohoaya ohuaya.

28. Tlazoco a ye nican tlalli tepetl yecocoliloya cema-nahuac a ohuaya.

29. Quennel conchihuazque atl popoca itlacoh in teuctli tlalli mocuepaya Mictlan onmatia Cacamatl onteuctli, quennel conchihuazque, ohuaya ohuaya.

---

XVI.

1. On onellelacic quexquich nic ya ittoa antocnihuan ayiaue noconnenemititica noyollon tlalticpac y no-conyculitica, ay niyuh can tinemi ahuian yeccan, ay cemellecan in tenahuac y, ah nonnohuicallan in quenon amican ohuaya.

2. Zan nellin quimati ye noyollo za nelli nicitto a antocnihuan, ayiahue aquin quitlatlauhtia icelteotl yiollo itlacoca con aya macan. Machamo oncan? In tlalticpac machamo oppan piltihua. Ye nelli nemoa in quenon amican ilhuicatl y itec icanyio oncan in netlamachtilo y ohuaya.

3. O yohualli icahuacan teuctlin popoca ahuiltlon Dios ipalnemohuani: chimalli xochitl in cuecuepontimani in mahuiztli moteca molinian tlalticpac, ye nican ic xochimicohuayan in ixtlahuac itec a ohuaya ohuaya.

26. Set to work and speak, you fathers, to your rulers, to your lords, that they may make a blazing fire of the smoking tzihuac wood.

27. The Acolhuacans were at Chalco, the Otomies were in your cornfields at Quauhquechollan, they laid them waste by the permission of God.

28. The fields and hills are ravaged, the whole land has been laid waste.

29. What remedy can they turn to? Water and smoke have spoiled the land of the rulers; they have gone back to Mictlan attaching themselves to the ruler Cacamatl. What remedy can they turn to?

---

XVI.

1. It is a bitter grief to see so many of you, dear friends not walking with me in spirit on the earth, and written down with me; that no more do I walk in company to the joyful and pleasant spots; that nevermore in union with you do I journey to the same place.

2. Truly I doubt in my heart if I really see you, dear friends; Is there no one who will pray to the one only God that he take this error from your hearts? Is no one there? No one can live a second time on earth. Truly they live there within the heavens, there in a place of delight only.

3. At night rises up the smoke of the warriors, a delight to the Lord the Giver of Life; the shield-flower spreads abroad its leaves, marvelous deeds agitate the earth; here is the place of the fatal flowers of death which cover the fields.

4. Yaonauac ye oncan yaopeuhca in ixtlahuac itec iteuhtlinpopoca ya milacatzoa y momalacachoa yao-xochimiquiztica antepilhuan in anteteuctin zan Chichimeca y ohuaya.

5. Maca mahui noyollo ye oncan ixtlahuatl itic, noco-nele hua in itzimiquiliztli zan quinequin toyollo yaomiquiztla ohuaya.

6. O anquin ye oncan yaonahuac, noconelehua in itzi miquiliztli can quinequin toyollo yaomiquiztla ohuaya.

7. Mixtli ye ehuatimani yehuaya moxoxopan ipalnemo-huani ye oncan celiztimani a in quauhtlin ocelotl, ye oncan cueponio o in tepilhuan huiya in tlachinol, ohuaya ohuaya.

8. In ma oc tonahuican antocnihuan ayiahue, ma oc xonahuican antepilhuan in ixtlahuatl itec, y nemoaqui-huic zan tictotlanehuia o a in chimalli xochitl in tlachinoll, ohuaya, ohuaya, ohuaya.

4. The battle is there, the beginning of the battle is in the open fields, the smoke of the warriors winds around and curls upward from the slaughter of the flowery war, ye friends and warriors of the Chichimecs.

5. Let not my soul dread that open field ; I earnestly desire the beginning of the slaughter, may thy soul long for the murderous strife.

6. O you who are there in the battle, I earnestly desire the beginning of the slaughter, may thy soul long for the murderous strife.

7. The cloud rises upward, rising into the blue sky of the Giver of Life ; there blossom forth prowess and daring, there, in the battle field, come the children to maturity.

•

8. Let us rejoice, dear friends, and may ye rejoice, O children, within the open field, and going forth to it, let us revel amid the shield-flowers of the battle.

XVII. Xochicucatl.

1. Can ti ya nemia ticuicanitl ma ya hualmoquetza xochihuehuatl quetzaltica huiconticac teocuitlaxochi-nenepaniuhticac y ayamo aye iliamo aye huiy ohuaya, ohuaya.

2. Tiquimonahuiltiz in tepilhuan teteucto in quauhtlo ocelotl ayamo, etc.

3. In tlacāce otemoc aya huehuetitlan ya nemi in cui-canitlhuia zan qui quetzal in tomaya quexexeloa aya icuic ipalnemoa qui ya nanquilia in coyolyantototl on-cuicatinemi xochimanamanaya taxocha ohuaya, ohuaya.

4. In canon in noconcaqui in tlatol aya tlacazo yehuatl ipalnemoa quiyananquilia quiyananquilia in coyolyantototl on cuicatinemi xochimanamanaya, etc.

5. In chalchihuitl ohuayee on quetzal pipixauhtimania in amo tlatolhuia, noyuh ye quittoa yayoquan yehuayan cuetzpal ohuaye anquinelin ye quimatin ipalnemoa ohuaya.

6. Noyuh quichihua con teuctlon timaloa yecan quetzalmaquiztla matilolticoya conahuiltia icelteotlhuia achcanon azo a yan ipalnemoa achcanon azo tle nel in tlalticpac ohuaya.

7. Macuelachic aya maoc ixquich cahuitl niquin no-tlanehui in chalchiuhtini in maquiztini in tepilhuan aya ; zan nicxochimalina in tecpillotl huia : zan ca nican nocuic ica ya nocon ilacatzohua a in huehuetitlan a ohuaya ohuaya.

8. Oc noncoati nican Huexotzinco y nitlātohuani ni teca ehuatzin huiya chalchiuhti zan quetzalitztin y,

XVII. A Flower Song.

1. Where thou walkest, O singer, bring forth thy flowery drum, let it stand amid beauteous feathers, let it be placed in the midst of golden flowers ;

2. That thou mayest rejoice the youths and the nobles in their grandeur.

3. Wonderful indeed is it how the living song descended upon the drum, how it loosened its feathers and spread abroad the songs of the Giver of Life, and the coyol bird answered, spreading wide its notes, offering up its flowery songs of flowers.

4. Wherever I hear those words, perhaps the Giver of Life is answering, as answers the coyol bird, spreading wide its notes, offering up its flowery song of flowers.

5. It rains down precious stones and beauteous feathers rather than words ; it seems to be as one reveling in food, as one who truly knows the Giver of Life.

6. Thus do the nobles glorify themselves with things of beauty, honor and delight, that they may please the one only god, though one knows not the dwelling of the Giver of Life, one knows not whether he is on earth.

7. May I yet for a little while have time to revel in those precious and honorable youths ; may I wreath flowers for their nobility ; may I here yet for a while wind the songs around the drum.

8. I am a guest here among the rulers of Huexotzinco ; I lift up my voice and sing of precious stones and emerniquincenquixtia in tepilhuan aya zan nicxochimalina in tecpillotl huia ohuaya ohuaya.

9. A in ilhuicac itic ompa yeya huitz in yectliyan xochitl yectliyan cuicatl y, conpolo antellel conpolo antotlayocol y in tlacazo yehuatl in Chichimecatl teuctli in teca yehuatzin ica xonahuiacan a ohuaya ohuaya.

10. Moquetzal izqui xochintzetzelo a in icniuhyotl aztlacaxtlatlapanica ye onmalinticac in quetzalxilo-xochitl imapan onnēnemi conchichichintinemi in teteuctin in tepilhuan.

11. Zan teocuitlacoyoltotl o huel yectli namocuic huel yectli in anq'ehua anquin ye oncan y xochitl y ya hualyuhcan y xochitl imapan amoncate in amontlatlātoa ye ohuaya ohui ohui ilili y yao ayya hue ho ama ha ilili ohua y yaohua.

12. O ach ancati quechol in ipalnemoa o ach ancati tlatocauh yehuan Dios huiya achto tiamehuan anquitzto-que tlahuizcalli amoncuicatinemi ohui, ohui, ilili, etc.

13. Maciuhtiao o in quinequi noyollo, zan chimalli xochitl mixochiuh ipalnemoani, quen conchihuaz noyollo yehua onentacico tonquizaco in tlalticpac a ohuaya ohuaya.

14. Zan ca yuhqui noyaz in o ompopoliuh xochitla antlenotleyoye in quemmanian, antlenitacihcayez in tlalticpac. Manel xochitl manel cuicatl, quen conchihuaz noyollo yehua onentacico tonquizaco in tlalticpac ohuaya ohuaya.

15. Manton ahuiacan antocnihuan aya ma on nequech nahualo nican huiya a xochintlalticpac ontiyanemi yenican ayac quitlamitehuaz in xochitl in cuicatl in mani a ichan ipalnemohuani yi ao ailili yi ao aya hue aye ohuaya.

alds; I select from among the youths those for whom I shall wreath the flowers of nobility.

9. There comes from within the heavens a good flower, a good song, which will destroy your grief, destroy your sorrow; therefore, Chief of the Chichimecs, be glad and rejoice.

10. Here, delightful friendship, turning about with scarlet dyed wings, rains down its flowers, and the warriors and youths, holding in their hands the fragrant xilo flowers, walk about inhaling the sweet odor.

11. The golden coyol bird sings sweetly to you, sweetly lifts its voice like a flower, like sweet flowers in your hand, as you converse and lift your voice in singing, etc.

12. Even like the quechol bird to the Giver of Life, even as the herald of God, you have waited for the dawn, and gone forth singing ohui, etc.

13. Although I wish that the Giver of Life shall give for flowers the shield-flower, how shall I grieve that your efforts have been in vain, that you have gone forth from the world.

14. Even as I shall go forth into the place of decayed flowers, so sometime will it be with your fame and deeds on earth. Although they are flowers, although they are songs, how shall I grieve that your efforts have been in vain, that you have gone forth from the world.

15. Let us be glad, dear friends, let us rejoice while we walk here on this flowery earth; may the end never come of our flowers and songs, but may they continue in the mansion of the Giver of Life.

16. In zancuelachitzincan tlalticpac aya ayaoc noiuhcan quennonamicani cuixocpacohua icniuhthiway auh in amozanio nican totiximatizo in tlalticpac y yiao ha ilili yiao.

17. Noconca con cuicatl noconca o quin tlapitzaya xochimecatl ayoquan teuctliya ahuayie, ohuayiao ayio yo ohua.

18. Zan mitzyananquili omitzyananquili xochin-calaitec y in aquiauhatzin in tlacateuhtli ayapancatl yahuayia.

19. Can tinemi noteouh ipalnemohuani mitztemohua in quemmanian y mocanitlaocoyan, nicuicanitlhuia, zan ni mitzahuiltiaya ohuiyan tililiyanco huia ohuaya ohuaya.

20. In zan ca izqui xochitl in quetzalizqui xochitl pix-ahui ye nican xopancalaitec i tlacuilolcalitec, zan nimitzahahuiltiaya ohui.

21. O anqui ye oncan Tlaxcala, ayahue, chalchiuh-tetzilacuicateque in huehuetitlan ohuaye, xochin poyon ayiahue Xicontencatl teuctli in Tizatlatcatzin in camaxochitzin cuicatica y mehelquiza xochiticaya on chielo itlätol ohuay icelteotl ohuaya.

22. O, anqui nohuia y, ye mochan ipalnemohua xochipetlatl ye noca xochitica on tzahticac oncan mitztlatlauhtia in tepilhua ohuaya.

23. In nepapan xochiquahuil onicac, aya, huehue-titlan a a yiahue, can canticaya quetzaltica malintimani, ya, yecxochitl motzetzeloaya ohuaya ohuaya.

24. Can quetzatzal petlacoatl yepac o, ye nemi coyolto-totl cuicatinemiya, can quinanquili teuctli ya, conahuilti-anquauhtloocelotl ohuaya ohuaya.

16. Yet a little while and your friends must pass from earth. What does friendship offer of enjoyment, when soon we shall no longer be known on earth?

17. This is the burden of my song, of the garland of flowers played on the flute, without equal in the place of the nobles.

18. Within the house of flowers the Lord of the Waters, of the Gate of the Waters, answers thee, has answered thee.

19. Where thou livest, my beloved, the Giver of Life sends down upon thee sometimes things of sadness; but I, the singer, shall make thee glad in the place of difficulty, in the place of cumber.

20. Here are the many flowers, the beauteous flowers, rained down within the house of spring, within its painted house, and I with them shall make thee glad.

21. O, you there in Tlaxcala, you have played like sweet bells upon your drums, even like brilliantly colored flowers. There was Xicontecatl, lord of Tizatlan, the rosy-mouthed, whose songs gave joy like flowers, who listened to the words of the one only God.

22. Thy house, O Giver of Life is in all places; its mats are of flowers, finely spun with flowers, where thy children pray to thee.

23. A rain of various flowers falls where stands the drum, beauteous wreaths entwine it, sweet flowers are poured down around it.

24. Where the brilliant scolopender basks, the coyol bird scatters abroad its songs, answering back the nobles, rejoicing in their prowess and might.

25. Xochitzetzeliuhtoc y, niconnetolilo antocnihuan huehuetitlan ai on chielo can nontlamati toyollo yehua ohuaya ohuaya.

26. In zan ca yehuan Dios tlaxic, ya, caquican yehual temoya o ilhuicatl itic, y, cuicatihuitz, y, quinanquilia o, angelotin ontlapitztihuitzteaya oyiahue yaia o o ohuaya ohuaya.

27. Zan ninentlamatia can niquauhtenco ayahue can
* * *

XVIII. Nican Ompehua Teponazcuicatl.

Tico, tico, toco, toto, auh ic ontlantiuh cuicatl, tiqui, ti ti, tito, titi.

1. Tollan aya huapalcalli manca, nozan in mamani coatlaquetzalli yaqui yacauhtehuac Nacxitzl Topiltzin, onquiquiztica ye choquililo in topilhuan ahuay yeyauh in polihuitiuh nechcan Tlapallan ho ay.

2. Nechcayan Cholollan oncan tonquizaya Poyauhtecatitlan, in quiyapanhuiya y Acallan anquiquiztica ye choquililon ye.

3. Nonohualco ye nihuitz ye nihui quecholi nimamali-teuctla, nicnotlamatia oyah quin noteuc ye ihuitimali, nechya icnocauhya nimatlac xochitl, ayao ayao o ayya y yao ay.

4. In tepetl huitomica niyaychocaya, axaliqueuhca nicnotlamatiya o yaquin noteuc (etc. as v. 3).

5. In Tlapallan aya mochieloca monahuatiloca ye cochitzla o anca ca zanio ayao, ayao, ayao.

25. Scattering flowers I rejoice you, dear friends, with my drum, awaiting what comes to our minds.

26. It reaches even to God, he hears it seeking him within the heavens, the song comes and the angels answer, playing on their flutes.

27. But I am sad within this wood. * * *

XVIII. Here begin Songs for the Teponaztli.

Tico, tico, toco, toto, and as the song approaches the end, tiqui, titi, tito, titi.

1. At Tollan there stood the house of beams, there yet stands the house of plumed serpents left by Nacxiti Topiltzin; going forth weeping, our nobles went to where he was to perish, down there at Tlapallan.

2. We went forth from Cholula by way of Poyauhtecatli, and ye went forth weeping down by the water toward Acallan.

3. I come from Nonohualco as if I carried quechol birds to the place of the nobles; I grieve that my lord has gone, garlanded with feathers; I am wretched like the last flower.

4. With the falling down of mountains I wept, with the lifting up of sands I was wretched, that my lord had gone.

5. At Tlapallan he was waited for, it was commanded that there he should sleep, thus being alone.

6. Zan tiyaolinca ye noteuc ic ihuitimali, tinahuatiloya ye Xicalanco o anca zacanco.

7. Ay yanco ay yanco ayamo aya ayhuiya ayanco ayyanco ayamo aye ahuiya que ye mamanz mocha moquiapana, oquen ye mamanz moteuccallatic ya icno-cauhqui nican Tollan Nonohualco ya y ya y ya o ay.

8. In ye quinti chocaya teuctlon, timalon que ye mām-aniz mochan (etc. as v. 7).

9. In tetl, in quahuatl o on timicuilotehuac nachcan Tollan y inon can in otontlatoco Naxitl Topiltzin y aye polihuiz ye motoca ye ic ye chocaz in momacehual ay yo.

10. Zan can xiuhcalliya cohuacallaya in oticmatchuac nachcan Tollan y inon can yn otontlatoco Naxitl Topiltzin (etc. as in v. 9).

6. In our battles my lord was garlanded with feathers;
we were commanded to go alone to Xicalanco.

7. Alas! and alas! who will be in thy house to attire thee? Who will be the ruler in thy house, left desolate here in Tollan, in Nonohualco?

8. After he was drunk, the ruler wept; we glorified ourselves to be in thy dwelling.

9. Misfortune and misery were written against us there in Tollan, that our leader Nacxitl Topiltzin was to be destroyed and thy subjects made to weep.

10. We have left the turquoise houses, the serpent houses there in Tollan, where ruled our leader Nacxitl Topiltzin.

XIX.

Tico toco toco ti quiti quiti quiti quito ; can ic mocueptiuh.

1. Tlapapal xochiceutli niyolaya nepapan tonacan xochitl moyahuaya oncueponti moquetzaco ya naya aya ye teo ya ixpan tonaa Santa Maria ayyo.

2. An ya ya cuicaya zan quetzala xihuitl tomolihui yan aya ye nitlachihual icelteotl y ye Dios aya ni itla-yocolaoya yecoc ya.

3. Zan ca tlaauilolpan nemia moyollo amoxpetlatl ipan toncuicaya tiquimonyaitotia teteuctin aya in obispo ya zan ca totatzin aya oncan titlatoa atlitempan ay yo.

4. Yehuan Dios mitzyocox aya xochitla ya mitztlacatilo yancuicatl mitzicuiloa Santa Maria in obispo ya.

XIX.

Tico, toco, toco, tiquiti, quiti, quiti, quito ; where it is to turn back again.

1. Resting amid parti-colored flowers I rejoiced ; the many shining flowers came forth, blossomed, burst forth in honor of our mother Holy Mary.

2. They sang as the beauteous season grew, that I am but a creature of the one only God, a work of his hands that he has made.

3. Mayst thy soul walk in the light, mayst thou sing in the great book, mayst thou join the dance of the rulers as our father the bishop speaks in the great temple.

4. God created thee, he caused thee to be born in a flowery place, and this new song to Holy Mary the bishop wrote for thee.

XX.

1. Tolteca icuilihua ahaa ya ha on tlantoc amoxtli ya moyollo ya on aya mochonaciticac o o Toltecyootl aic aya ninemiz ye nican ay yo.

2. Ac ya nechcuiliz, ac ye nohuan oyaz o, nicaz a anni icuihuan aya y yancuicanitl y yehetl y noxochiuh non cuica ihuitequi onteixpan ayyo.

3. Huey in tetl nictequintomahuac quahuitl, nic-icuiloa yancuicatl itech aya oncan nomitoz in quemmanian in can niyaz nocuica machio nicyacauhtiaz in tlalticpac, y onnemiz noyol zan ca ye nican ya hualla y yancoya nolnamicoca nemiz ye noteyo ay yo.

4. Nichocaya niquittoaya nicnotza noyollo ma niquitta cuicanelhuayotl ayama nicyatlalaquiya ma ya ica tlalticpac quimman mochihua onnenemiz noyol y. Zan ca teucxochitl ahuiaca ipotocaticac mocepanoayan toxochiuh ay ye ayao ohuiy on can quiya itzmolini ye nocuic celia notlatollaquillo ohua in toxochiuh icac iquiapani ayao.

5. Tel ca cahua xochitl ahuiac xeliuhtihuitz a ipotocaya in ahuiyac poyomatlin pixahua oncan ninenenemi nicuicanitl y ye aya o ohui y on ca quiya itzmolini ye nocuic celia, etc.

XX.

1. The Toltecs have been taken, alas, the book of their souls has come to an end, alas, everything of the Toltecs has reached its conclusion, no longer do I care to live here.

2. Who will take me? Who will go with me? I am ready to be taken, alas. All that was fresh, the perfume, my flowers, my songs, have gone along with them.

3. Great is my affliction, weighty is my burden; I write out a new song concerning it, that some time I may speak it there where I shall go, a song to be known when I shall leave the earth, that my soul shall live after I have gone from here, that my fame shall live fresh in memory.

4. I cried aloud, I looked about, I reflected how I might see the root of song, that I might plant it here on the earth, and that then it should make my soul to live. The sweet exhalations of the lovely flowers rose up uniting with our flowers; one hears them growing as my song buds forth, filled with my words our flowers stand upright in the waters.

5. But the flowers depart, their sweetness is divided and exhales, the fragrant poyomatl rains down its leaves where I the poet walk in sadness; one hears them growing, etc.

XXI. Huexotzincayotl.

Viniendo los de Huexotzinco à pedir socorro à Moteuczoma Tlaxcalla.

1. Tlacuiloltzetzeliuhticac moyoliol tiMoteuczomâtzi nichuicatihuitz nictzetzeloatihuitz y o huetzcani xochinquetzalpapalotl moquetzalizouhtihuitz noconitotia chal-chiuhatlaquiquizcopa niyahueloncuica chalchiuhhuilacapitzli niteocuitlapitza ya ho ay la ya o haye ohuichile amiyacale.

2. Ohuaya ye onnicelehuia moxochiuh aya ipalnemoani yehuaya Dios aya ilihuāca nahuiche nictzetzeloaya noncuicatilo yaha y.

3. Tozmilini xochitl in noyolyol ay yahue tozmilini xochitl noteponaz ayanco ayancayome oncana y yahue nixxochiamoxtozimmanaya itlatol ayanco ayanca yomeho.

4. Xompaqui xonahuia annochipanicantiyazque ye ichano nohueyetzinteuctli Moteuczomatzi, totlaneuh tlpc totlaneuh uelic xochitl o ayanco.

5. Tlachinoltepec yn ahuicacopa tixochitonameyo timo-quetzaco y yehuan Dios a ocelozacatl ypan quauhtli choca ymopopoyauhtoc y yanco y liyan cay yahue ayli y yacalco y ya y yeho zaca y yahue.

6. Ohuaya yehe nipa tlantinemia ixpan Dios a ninozozohuayatlahuquechol, zaquan quetzal in tlayahualol papalotl mopilihuitzetzelo teixpana xochiatlaquiquizcopa oh tlatoca ye nocuic y yanco ili, etc.

7. Nehcoya ompa ye nihiuthuiya xoxouhqui hueyatla ymancan zanniman olini pozoni tetecuica ic nipa tlania,

XXI. A Song of the Huexotzincos, Coming to Ask Aid of Montezuma Against Tlaxcalla.

1. Raining down writings for thy mind, O Montezuma, I come hither, I come raining them down, a very jester, a painted butterfly; stringing together pretty objects, I seem to be as one cementing together precious stones, as I chant my song on my emerald flute, as I blow on my golden flute, ya ho, ay la, etc.

2. Yes, I shall cause thy flowers to rejoice the Giver of Life, the God in heaven, as hither I come raining down my songs, ya ho.

3. A sweet voiced flower is my mind, a sweet voiced flower is my drum, and I sing the words of this flowery book.

4. Rejoice and be glad ye who live amid the flowers in the house of my great lord Montezuma, we must finish with this earth, we must finish with the sweet flowers, alas.

5. At the Mount of Battle we bring forth our sweet and glittering flowers before God, plants having the lustre of the tiger, like the cry of the eagle, leaving glorious memory, such are the plants in this house.

6. Alas! in a little while there is an end before God to all living; let me therefore string together beauteous and yellow feathers, and mingling them with the dancing butterflies rain them down before you, scattering the words of my song like water dashed from flowers.

7. I would that I could go there where lies the great blue water surging, and smoking and thundering, till after a time it retires again: I shall sing as the quetzal, the zan iquetzal in tototl xihquechol tototl no chiuhtihuitz y ni yahuinac ya Huexotzinco Atzalan ayome.

8. Zan niquintocaz aya niquimiximatituih nohueyotzitzinhuan chalchiuhquechol y canca xihquechol in teocuitlapapalotl in cozcatototl ontlapia ye onca Hue-xotzinco Atzalan ayame;

9. Xochi Atzalaan teocuitlaatl chalchiuhatl y nepa-niuhyā itlatoaya in quetzalcanauhtli quetzalnocuitlapilli cuecuyahuaya yliya yliya yaho ayli yaho aye huichile anicale.

10. Huecapan nicac nicuicanitl huiya zaquan petlatolini, ma nica yēninemia nicyeyectian cuicatla in nic xochiotia yayaho yahii.

blue quechol, when I go back to Huexotzinco among the waters (or, and Atzalan).

8. I shall follow them, I shall know them, my beloved Huexotzincos; the emerald quechol birds, the green quechol, the golden butterflies, and yellow birds, guard Huexotzinco among the waters (or, and Atzalan).

9. Among the flowery waters, the golden waters, the emerald waters, at the junction of the waters which the blue duck rules moving her spangled tail.

10. I the singer stand on high on the yellow rushes; let me go forth with noble songs and laden with flowers.

XXII.

Tico tico ticoti tico tico ticoti auh ic ontlantiuh in cuicatl totoco totoco.

1. Xichocayan nicuicanitl nicitta noxochiuh zan nomac ommania zan quihuintia ye noyollo ni cuicatl aya nohuian nemia, zan ca ye noyollo notlayocola in cayo.

2. Xiuhlamatelolla quetzalchalchiuhtla ipan ye nicmatia nocuic aya ma yectlaxochitl y, zan nomac ton mania, etc.

3. In quetzalin chalchiuhtla ipan ye nicmatia yectli ye nocuic yectli noxochiuh annicuihuan tepilhuan aya xonahuiacan a ayac onnemiz o in tlalticpacayo.

4. O an niquitquiz ye niaz yectli nocuic yectli noxochiuhui annicuihuan tepilhuan aya.

5. O huayanco o nichocaya a huayanco o cahua y yahue nictetzelo xochitl ay yo.

6. Mach nohuan tonyaz quennonamica o ah nicitquiz xochitl zan nicuicanitl huiya ma yo a xonahuiyacan to ya nemia ticaqui ye nocuic ahuaya.

7. Ay ca nichocaya nicuicanitl ya icha ahuicaloyan cuicatl ha Mictlan temohuiloya yectliya xochitl onca ya oncaa y yao ohuayan ca ya ilaca tziuhan ca na y yo.

8. Amo nequimilool amo neccuiltonol antepilhuan aychaa ohuicaloyan cuicatl.

XXII.

Tico, tico, ticoti, tico, tico, ticoti, and then the song ends with totoco, totoco.

1. In the place of tears I the singer watch my flowers; they are in my hand; they intoxicate my soul and my song, as I walk alone with them, with my sad soul among them.

2. In this spot, where the herbage is like sweet ointment and green as the turquoise and emerald, I think upon my song, holding the beauteous flowers in my hand, etc. (as in v. 1).

3. In this spot of turquoise and emerald, I think upon beauteous songs, beauteous flowers; let us rejoice now, dear friends and children, for life is not long upon earth.

4. I shall hasten forth, I shall go to the sweet songs, the sweet flowers, dear friends and children.

5. O he! I cried aloud; O he! I rained down flowers as I left.

6. Let us go forth anywhere; I the singer shall find and bring forth the flowers; let us be glad while we live; listen to my song.

7. I the poet cry out a song for a place of joy, a glorious song which descends to Mictlan, and there turns about and comes forth again.

8. I seek neither vestment nor riches, O children, but a song for a place of joy.

XXIII. Ycuic Nezahualcoyotzin.

Totoco totoco tico, totoco totoco ic ontlantiuh tico titico ti tico tico.

1. Nicaya quetza con tohuehueuh aoniquimitotia quauhtlocelo yn ca tiyayhcac in cuicaxochitl, nictemoan cuicatli ye tonequimilol ayyo.
2. Ti Nopiltzi o ti Nezahualcoyotl o tiya Mictl a quenonamica y yece miyoncan ay yo.
3. Quiyon quiyon caya nichocaya ya ni Nezahualcoyotl huiya queni yeno yaz o ya nipolihiuz oya miquitla ye nimitzcahua noteouh ypalnemo o tinechnahuatia ye niaz nipolihiuz aya, yo.
4. Quenon maniz tlallin Acolihuacan huiya cuixoca quen mano o ticmomoyahuaz in momacehuali ye nimitzcahua noteouh, etc.
5. Can yio cuicatli tonequimilol quipoloaya a in totlacuiloli tepilhuan oo maya o huitihua nican aya ayac ichan tlalticpac oo ticyacencahuazque huelic ye xochitl ayio.
6. O ayae quitlamitaz monecuiltonol ypalnemoa a noyolquimati cuelachic otictlanehuico Nezahualcoyotzin ay oppatihua nican anaya y chan tlcpc. Oon yn ay oppatihua in tlalticpacqui, zan nicuicanitl ayaho onnichocaya niquelnamiqui Nezahualcoyotl aya ho.
7. Xo acico ye nican in teotl aya ypalnemoa, ayaho on nichocaya a niquelnamiqui Nezalhuacoyotl ayio.

XXIII. Songs of the Prince Nezahualcoyotl.

Totoco, totoco, tico, totoco totoco, then it ends with tico titico, titico, tico.

1. I bring forth our drum that I may show the power and the grandeur in which thou standest, decked with flowers of song: I seek a song wherewith to drape thee, ah! oh!

2. Thou, my Lord, O thou Nezahualcoyotl, thou goest to Mictlan in some manner and at a fixed time, ere long.

3. For this, for this, I weep, I Nezahualcoyotl, inasmuch as I am to go, I am to be lost in death, I must leave thee; my God, the Giver of Life, thou commandest me, that I go forth, that I be lost, alas.

4. How shall the land of Acolhuacan remain, alas? How shall we, thy servants, spread abroad its fame? I must leave thee; my God, etc.

5. Even this song for thy draping may perish, which we have written for our children, it will no longer have a home here on earth when we shall wholly leave these fragrant flowers.

6. Alas! thy riches shall end; the Giver of Life teaches me that but for a little while do we enjoy the prince Nezahualcoyotl, nor a second time will he come to his house on earth; no second time will he rejoice on earth; but I the singer grieve, recalling to memory Nezahualcoyotl.

7. Let us seek while here the god, the Giver of Life; I grieve, recalling to memory Nezahualcoyotl.

XXIV.

Quititi, quititi, quititi tocoto, tocoti tocoto tocoti zan ic mocueptiuh.

1. Ma xochicuicoya ma ichtoa nichuana ayyahue teyhuinti xochitl ao ya noyehcoc ye nica poyoma xahuallan timaliuhtihuitz ay yo.

2. Ma xochitl oyecoc ye nican ayyahue çan tlaahuixochitla moyahuaya motzetzeloa ancazo yehuatl in nepapaxochitl ayyo. Zan commoni huehuetl ma ya netotilo.

3. Yn quetzal poyomatl ayc ihcuilihuic noyol nicui-canitl in xochitl ayan tzetzelihui ya ancuel ni cuiya ma xonahuacan ayio zan noyolitic ontlapanion cuicaxochitl nicyamoyahuaya yxoochitla.

4. Cuicatl ya ninoquinilotehuaz in quemmanian xochineneliuhtiaz noyollo yehuan tepilhuan oonteteuctin in ca yio.

5. Zan ye ic nichoca in quemanian zan nicaya ihtoa noxochiteyo nocuicatoca nictlalitehuaz in quemanian xochineneliuhtiaz, etc.

XXIV.

Quititi, quititi, quiti tocoto, tocoti, tocoto, tocoti, then it is to turn back again.

1. Let me pluck flowers, let me see them, let me gather the really intoxicating flowers; the flowers are ready, many colored, varied in hue, for our enjoyment.

2. The flowers are ready here in this retired spot, this spot of fragrant flowers, many sorts of flowers are poured down and scattered about; let the drum be ready for the dance.

3. I the singer take and pour down before you from my soul the beautiful poyomatl, not to be painted, and other flowers; let us rejoice, while I alone within my soul disclose the songs of flowers, and scatter them abroad in the place of flowers.

4. I shall leave my songs in order that sometime I may mingle the flowers of my heart with the children and the nobles.

5. I weep sometimes as I see that I must leave the earth and my flowers and songs, that sometime these flowers will be vain and useless.

XXV.

Tico toco tocoto ic ontlantiuh ticoto ticoto.

1. Toztliyan quechol nipa tlantinemia in tlallaicpac oquihuinti ye noyol ahua y ya i.

2. Ni quetzaltototl niyecoya ye iquiapan ycelteotl yxochitipac nihueloncuica oo nicuicaihtoa paqui ye noyol ahua.

3. Xochiatl in pozontimania in tlallaicpac oquihuinti ye noyol ahua.

4. Ninochoquilia niquinotlamati ayac in chan oo tlallicpac ahua.

5. Zan niquittoaya ye ni Mexicatli mani ya huiya nohtlatoca tequantepec ni yahui polihuin chittepehua a ya ye choca in tequantepehua o huaye.

6. Ma ca qualania nohueyotehua Mexicatli polihui chile.

7. Citlalin in popocaya ipan ye moteca y za ye polihui a zan ye xochitecatl ohuaye.

8. Zan ye chocaya amāxtecatl aya caye chocaya tequantepehua.

XXV.

Tico, toco, tocoto, and then it ends, ticoto, ticoto.

1. The sweet voiced quechol there, ruling the earth, has intoxicated my soul.

2. I am like the quetzal bird, I am created in the house of the one only God; I sing sweet songs among the flowers; I chant songs and rejoice in my heart.

3. The fuming dew-drops from the flowers in the field intoxicate my soul.

4. I grieve to myself that ever this dwelling on earth should end.

5. I foresaw, being a Mexican, that our rule began to be destroyed, I went forth weeping that it was to bow down and be destroyed.

6. Let me not be angry that the grandeur of Mexico is to be destroyed.

7. The smoking stars gather together against it; the one who cares for flowers is about to be destroyed.

8. He who cared for books wept, he wept for the beginning of the destruction.

XXVI.

Toto titiquiti titiquiti ic ontlantiuh tocotico tocoti toto titiqui toto titiquiti.

1. Oya moquetz huel oon ma on netotilo teteuctin aya ma onnetlanehuihuilo chalchihuitl on quetzali patlahuac, ayac ichan tlalticpac, ayio zan nomac onmania ooo y xochiuh aya ipalnemoa ma onnetlanehuilo chalchihuitl.

2. Oyohual in colinia o on in icelteotl ipalnemaa Anahuac o onnemias noyol ayio.

3. In yancuica oncan quixima ipalnemoani ca ye Nonoalco ahuilizapan i in teuctli yehua Nezahualpilli y yece ye oncan aya in tlacoch tenanpan Atlixco ayio.

4. Zan momac otitemic motlahuan zomal a ica tica-huiltia icelteotl in teuctli yehua.

5. Y yeho aye icnotlamati noyollo, zan niNonoalcatl, zan can nicolintototl o nocamapan aya Mexicatl in ca yio.

6. On quetzal pipixauhtoc motlachinolxochiuh in ipalnemoa zan ca nicolintototl, etc.

XXVI.

Toto titiquiti titiquiti, then it ends tocotico, tocoti toto titiqui toto titiquiti.

1. Come forth to the dance, ye lords, let there be abundance of turquoise and feathers; our dwelling on earth is not for long; only let the gods give me flowers to my hand, give me abundance of turquoises.

2. Come let us move in the dance in honor of the one only god, the Giver of Life, while my soul lives by the waters (or, in Anahuac).

3. The Giver of Life made known a new song after the lord Nezahualpilli entered the strongholds of Nonoalco and sped his arrows within the walls of Atlixco.

4. Thou hast filled thy plate and thy cup in thy hands and hast rejoiced in the one only God, the Lord.

5. Alas, how I am afflicted in my soul, I, a resident of Nonoalco; I am like a wild bird, my face is that of a Mexican.

6. The beauteous flowers of thy battles lie abundantly snowed down, O Giver of Life; I am like a wild bird, etc.

XXVII.

Toco toco tiqui tiqui ic ontlantiuh toco tico tocoti.

1. Ma ya pehualo ya nicuihua in ma ya on acico ye nicaan aya oya yēcoc yehuan Dios in cayio in ma ya ca ya onahuilihuan tepilhuan a ayamo acico ya yehuan Dios oncan titemoc yehuan Dios a oncan huel in oncan tlacat y ye Yesu Cristo in ca yio.

2. In oncan tlahuizcalli milintimani mochan aya moxochiuhaya Dios aya chalchiuhcueponi maquitzetzelihui onnetlamachtiloya in ca yio in oncan ya o nepapan izhuayo moxochiuh aya Dios a.

3. Zan ye xochitl moyahua oo zan ca itlatol in ipalnemoani o ontepan ye moteca anahuac ooica tic-huelmana atl on yan tepetl ayio.

4. Zan temomac mania cemilhuatl in niman ye tehuatl toconyaittoaya ipalnemoani.

XXVII.

Toco, toco, tiqui, tiqui, and then it ends toco, tico, tocoti.

1. Let my song be begun, let it spread abroad from here as far as God has created; may the children be glad, may it reach to God, there to God whom we seek, there where is Jesus Christ who was born.

2. There the dawn spreads widely over the fields, over thy house, and thy flowers, O God, blossom beauteous as emeralds; they rain down in wondrous showers, in that place of happiness; there alone may my flowers, of various leaves, be found, O God.

3. There the flowers are the words of the Giver of Life; they are upon the mountains and by the waters; we find them alike by the water and the mountain.

4. Our day is in thy hand, and soon we shall see thee, thou Giver of Life.

NOTES.

---

SONG I.

The song is an allegory, portraying the soul-life of the poet. By the flowers which he sets forth to seek, we are to understand the songs which he desires to compose. He asks himself where the poetic inspiration is to be sought, and the answer is the same as was given by Wordsworth, that it is to the grand and beautiful scenes of Nature that the poet must turn for the elevation of soul which will lift him to the sublimest heights of his art. But this exaltation bears with it the heavy penalty that it disqualifies for ordinary joys. As in medieval tales, he who had once been admitted to fairyland, could nevermore conquer his longing to return thither, so the poet longs for some other condition of existence where the divine spirit of song may forever lift him above the trials and the littleness of this earthly life.

There is no sign of Christian influence in the poem, and it is probably one handed down from a generation anterior to the Conquest.

1. The word peuhcayoil from peua, to begin, intimates that this was a song chanted at the beginning of a musical entertainment. The verses are longer, and the phraseology plainer than in many of those following. There is also an absence of interjections and lengthened vowels, all of which indicate that the time was slow, and the actions of the singer temperate, as was the custom at the beginning of a baile. (See Introd., p. 20.)

1. Ninoyolnonotza, a reflexive, frequentative form from notza, to think, to reflect, itself from the primitive radicle no, mind, common to both the Nahuatl and Maya languages. The syllable yol is for yolloll, heart, in its figurative sense of soul or mind. The combination of yolnonotza is not found in any of the dictionaries. The full sense is, "I am thinking by myself, in my heart."

ahuiaca, an adverbial form, usually means "pleasant-smelling," though in derivation it is from the verb ahuia, to be satisfied with.

quetzal, for quetzalli, a long, handsome blue feather from the quetzal bird, often used figuratively for anything beautiful or precious.

chalchiuh for chalchiuittl, the famous green-stone, jade or emerald, so highly prized by the Mexicans; often used figuratively for anything noble, beautiful and esteemed.

huitzitzicatin, a word not found in the dictionaries, appears to be from tzitzilca, to tremble, usually from cold, but here applied to the tremulous motion of the humming bird as it hovers over a flower.

zacuan, the yellow plumage of the zacuan bird, and from similarity of color here applied to the butterfly. The zacuan is known to ornithologists as the Oriolus dominicensis. These birds are remarkably gregarious, sometimes as many as a hundred nests being found in one tree (see Eduard Mühlenpfort, Versuch einer getreuen Schilderung der Republik Mexiko, Bd. I, p. 183).

acxoyatzinitzcanquauhlla; composed of acxoyatl, the wild laurel; tzinitzcan, the native name of the Trogon mexicanus, renowned for its beautiful plumage; quauhlli, a tree; and the place-ending lla, meaning abundance.

tlauquecholxochiquauhlla; composed of tlauquechol, the native name of the red, spoon-billed heron, Platalea ajaja; xochitl, flower; quauhlli, tree; and the place-ending lla.

tonameyotoc, the root is the verb tona, to shine, to be warm; tonatiuh, the sun; tonameyotl, a ray of the sun, etc. As warmth and sunlight are the conditions of growth and fertility, many derivatives from this root signify abundance, riches, etc.

mocehcmelquixtia; mo is the reflexive pronoun, 3d sing., often used impersonally; cehcmel, is a reduplicated form of the numeral ce, one; it conveys the sense of entire, whole, perfect, and is thus an interesting illustration of the tendency of the untutored mind to associate the idea of unity with the notion of perfection; quixtia is the compulsive form of quiza, to go forth.

onechittitique; 3d person plural, preterit, of the causative form of itta, to see; ittitia, to cause to see, to show; nech, me, accusative form of the pronoun.

nocuexanco; from cuexantli, the loose gown worn by the natives, extending from the waist to the knees. Articles were carried in it as in an apron; no-cuexan-co, my-gown-in, the terminal lli being dropped on suffixing the postposition.

tepilhuan; from pilli, boy, girl, child, young person, with the relative, indefinite, pronominal prefix te, and the pronominal plural termination huan, to take which, pilli drops its last syllable, li;

hence, te-pil-huan, somebody's children, or in general, the young people. This word is of constant occurrence in the songs.

teuteuctin, plural with reduplication of teuctli, a noble, a ruler, a lord. The singer addresses his audience by this respectful title.

2. ixochicuicatzini; i, poss. pron. 3d sing.; xochitl, flower; cui-call, song; tzin, termination signifying reverence or affection; "their dear flower-songs."

yuhqui tepetl, etc. The echo in the Nahuatl tongue is called tepeyolotl, the heart or soul of the mountain (not in Simeon's Dictionnaire, but given by Tezozomoc, Cronica Mexicana, p. 202).

meyaquetzalatl; from meya, to flow slowly, to trickle; quetzalli, beautiful; atl, water.

xiuhtotoameyalli; the root xiuh meant originally green (or blue, as they were not distinguished apart); hence xiuill, a leaf or plant, the green herbage; as where the Nahuas then were this was renewed annually, xiuill came to mean a year; as a comet seems to have a bunch of fiery flames growing from it, this too was xiuill, and a turquoise was called by the same term; in the present compound, it is employed adjectively; xiuh-totol, turquoise-bird, is the Guiraca cerulea, Linn.; ameyalli, from atl, water, meya, to trickle, and the noun ending.

mo-molla; to throw one's self, to dash one's self against something, etc.

centzontlatolli; literally, "four hundred speeches." The numeral four hundred was employed, like the Greek "myriad," to express vaguely any extraordinary number. The term may be rendered "the myriad-voiced," and was the common name of the mocking-bird, called by ornithologists Turdus polyglottus, Calandria polyglotta, and Mimus polyglotta.

coyoltotol, literally, "the rattle-bird," so called from its peculiar notes (coyolli = a rattle), is one of the Tanagridae, probably the Piranga hepatica.

ayacachicahuactimani; composed of ayacachtli, the rattle (see ante, page 24); and icahuaca, to sing (of birds); to the theme of this verb is added the connective syllable ti, and the verb mani, which, in such connection, indicates that the action of the former verb is expended over a large surface, broadly and widely (see Olmos, Gram. de la Langue Nahuatl, p. 155, where, however, the connective ti is erroneously taken for the pronoun ti).

huelletozcalemique; composed of huel, good or well; tetozca, from tozquiltl, the singing voice ; and temo, to let fall, to drop ; que is the plural verbal termination.

3. ma n-amech-ellelti, vetative causative from elleloa, to cause pain.

cactimotlalique, appears to be a compound of caqui, to listen, to hear, and tlalia, to seat, to place.

amohuampotzitzinhuau, a compound based on the pronoun of the second person plural, amo, the particle po, which means similarity or likeness, and the reduplicated reverential plural termination. The same particle po, appears a few lines later in toquichpo-huan ; potli = comrade, compeer.

4. Tepeitic, from tepetl, mountain, ititl, belly, from which is derived the proposition itic, within, among. The term is applied to a ravine or sequestered valley.

5. quauhtliya ocelotl, the expression quauhtli, ocelotl, is of frequent occurrence in the ancient Nahuatl writers. The words mean literally "eagle, tiger." These were military titles applied to officers commanding small bodies of troops ; figuratively, the words mean control, power, and dignity ; also, bravery and virtue. Comp. Agustin de Vetancurt, Teatro Mexicano, Tratado II, cap. 3.

6. in tloque in nahuaque ; this expression, applied by the ancient Nahuas to the highest divinity, is attributed by some to Nezahuacoyotl (see above, p. 36). It is composed of two postpositions tloc and nahaac, and in the form given conveys the meaning "to whom are present and in whom are immanent all things having life." See Agustin de la Rosa, Analisis de la Platica Mexicana sobre el Misterio de la Santisima Trinidad, p. 11 (Guadalajara, 1871). The epithet was applied in heathen times to the supreme divinity Tonacateotl ; see the Codex Telleriano-Remensis, in Kingsborough's Mexico, Vol. VI, p. 107.

8. ximoayan ; this word does not appear in the dictionaries of Molina or Simeon, and is a proof, as is the sentiment of the whole verse, that the present poem belongs to a period previous to the Conquest. The term means "where all go to stay," and was the name of the principal realm of departed souls in the mythology of the ancient Nahuas. See Bartholome de Alva, Confessionario en Lengua Mexicana, fol. 13 (Mexico, 1634) ; Tezozomoc, Cronica Mexicana, cap. 55 ; D. G. Brinton ; The Journey of the Soul (in Aztec and Aryan Myths), Philadelphia, 1883.

yhuintia, causative form of ihuinti, to make drunk. The Nirvana of the Nahuas was for the soul to lie in dense smoke and darkness, filled with utter content, and free from all impressions ("en lo profundo de contento y obscuridad," Tezozomoc, Cronica Mexicana, cap. 55).

II.

On the signification of the titles given to this poem see the Introduction, § 3.

1. yehuan Dios; literally "who are God;" the introduction of the Spanish Dios, God, is in explanation of in tloque in nahuaque; so far from proving that this song is of late date, this vouches for its genuine ancient character, through the necessity for such explanation.

2. nelhuayoll, the essence or source of something, its true nature; probably from nelli, true.

teoquecholme; the prefix teotl, divine, is often added as an expression of admiration. Sahagun mentions the teoquechol as a bird of brilliant plumage.

III.

The poet recalls a recent attendance on the obsequies of an acquaintance, and seeks to divert his mind from the gloomy contemplation of death and the ephemeral character of mortal joys by urging his friend to join in the pleasure of the hour, and by suggesting the probability of an after life.

1. xochicalco; compounded of xochitl, flower; calli, house; and the postposition, co. The term was applied to any room decorated with flowers; here, to the mortuary chamber, which Tezozomoc tells us was decked with roses and brilliant feathers.

ipalnemohuani, literally "the one by whom life exists." The composition is i, possessive pronoun, third person, singular; pal, postposition, by; nemoani, singular of the present in ni of the impersonal form of the verb nemi, to live, with the meaning to do habitually that which the verb expresses. It is an ancient epithet applied to the highest divinity, and is found in the Codex Telleriano-Remensis, Kingsborough's Mexico, Vol. VI, p. 128, note.

tolquatectitlan, from toloa, to lower, to bow; quatequia, to immerse the head; tlan, place ending. In the ancient funeral ceremonies the faces of the assistants were laved with holy water. On this rite see the note of Orozco y Berra to his edition of the Cronica Mexicana of Tezozomoc, p. 435 (Mexico, 1878).

xoyacaltitlan; from xoyau, to spoil, to decay, whence xoyauhqui, rank, unpleasant, like the odor of decaying substances.

xochicopal tlenamactli, "the incense of sweet copal," which was burned in the funeral chamber (see Tezozomoc's description of the obsequies of Axayaca, Cron. Mex., cap. 55).

2. The translation of this verse offers some special difficulties.

IV.

A poem of unusually rich metaphors is presented, with the title "A Song of the Mexicans, after the manner of the Otomis." It is a rhapsody, in which the bard sings his "faculty divine," and describes the intoxication of the poetic inspiration. It has every inherent mark of antiquity, and its thought is free from any tincture of European influence.

2. miahuatototl, literally, "the corn-silk bird," miahua being the term applied to the silk or tassel of the maize ear when in the milk. I have not found its scientific designation.

6. poyomatl; the poyomatli is described by Sahagun (Hist. de la Nueva España, Lib. X, cap. 24) as a species of rose, portions of which were used to fill the cane tubes or pipes used for smoking. He names it along with certain fungi employed for the same purpose, and it probably produced a narcotic effect.

V.

From the wording, this appears to be one of the lost songs of Nezahualcoyotl, either composed by him or sung before him. (See the Introduction, p. 35.) It is a funeral dirge, dwelling on the fact of universal and inevitable death, and the transitoriness of life. There is in it no hint of Christian consolation, no comfortable hope of happiness beyond the grave. Hence it dates, in all likelihood, from a period anterior to the arrival of the missionaries.

1. tonequimilol; I take this to be a derivative from quimiloa, to wrap up, especially, to shroud the dead, to wrap the corpse in its winding sheets, as was the custom of the ancient Mexicans.

The word, however, seems an archaic form, as it does not lend itself readily to analysis.

The expression in Dios, I explain as in the note to II, 1, and do not consider that it detracts from the authentic antiquity of the poem.

2. yoyontzin; on the significance of this appellation of Nezahualcoyotl, see Introduction, p. 35.

3. ti Nezahualcoyotl; "thou Nezahualcoyotl." The princely poet may have addressed himself in this expression, or we may suppose the song was chanted before him.

5. Nopiltzin; the reference is to Quetzalcoatl, the famous "fair God" of the Nahuas, and in myth, the last ruler of the Toltecs. See D. G. Brinton, American Hero Myths (Philadelphia, 1882). The term means "my beloved Lord." On Tezozomoc, see Introduction, p. 35.

6. The text of the latter part or refrain of verses 5 and 6 is corrupt, and my translation is doubtful.

VI.

Most of the poems in this collection are not assigned to any author, but this, and apparently the one following, are recorded as the compositions of Tetlapan Quetzanitzin. He is evidently the personage spoken of by Sahagun as "King of Tlacopan," as present with Montezuma on the occasion of his first interview with Cortez. Later in the struggle Tetlapan appears as the associate of Quauhtemoctzin, the "King of Mexico." (See Sahagun, Hist. de la Nueva España, Lib. XII, cap. 16 and 40.) M. Rémi Simeon explains the name to mean "he who deceives the people by magic;" deriving it from quetza, he places; te, the people, tlepan, on the fire. A simpler derivation seems to me possible from tellapanqui, miner, or quarryman (literally, stone-breaker), and quetzalli, red; quetzatzin, the lord or master of the miners.

Both this and the following are war songs, and have marked similarity in thought and wording. The introduction of the Spanish Dios was doubtless substituted by the scribe, for the name of some native god of war, perhaps Huitzilopochtli.

1. Aua; this word I take to be a form of the interjection yahue, or, as Olmos gives it in his Grammar, aa.

2. nepohualoyan ; "the place of counting or reckoning," from pohua, to count. The reference is not clear, and the translation uncertain. In some parts of ancient Mexico they used in their accounting knotted cords of various colors, like the Peruvian quipus. These were called nepohualtzitzin.

4. This verse is remarkable for its sonorous phrases and the archaic forms of the words. Its translation offers considerable difficulty.

xontlachayan, I take to be an imperative form from tlachia, to look, with the euphonic on.

leoatl tlachinolli, literally "the divine water (i. e. blood), the burning," and the expression means war, battle. In one of his sermons Fray Juan Bautista describes the fall of Jericho in the words, otlaltitechya in altepetl teuatl tlachinolli ye opoliuh, and explains it, "the town was destroyed with fire and blood" (Sermones en Lengua Mexicana, p. 122). The word tlachinolli is from chinoa, to burn.

quetzalatpilo ; a compound of quetzalli, a beautiful feather, and tlalpiloni, the band which passed around the head to keep the hair in place.

5. melchiquiuh ticaya ; "he who presented his breast," an imperfect, reflexive form. Molina gives melchiquiuh petlauhqui, with the translation despechugado. Vocabulario Mexicana, s. v.

VII.

The second specimen from the muse of Tetlapan Quetzanitzin is the noblest war song in the collection. It is an appeal to his friends to join in a foray to Chiapas. The intoxication of the battle field is compared to that produced by the strong white wine prepared from maguey, which was drunk only on solemn occasions. The bard likens the exhaustion of his fellow warriors from previous conflicts, to the stupor which follows a debauch, and he exhorts them to throw it aside.

1. oamaxque, o, pret. am, you, axque, 2d pl. pret. from ay, to do.

octicatl, apparently an old form from octli, the intoxicating beverage prepared from the maguey.

oanquique, 2d pl. pret. from cui, to take.

ohuican, a place of difficulty and danger.

The frequent addition of the terminal o in this and the succeeding verses is merely euphonic.

2. teoatl tlachinolli; see note VI, 4.

in maquiztli tlazoteltl, the beloved jewels, a phrase which indicates that the broken stones and splintered emeralds referred to are the young warriors who fall in battle, the pride of their parents' hearts, who are destroyed in the fight.

The tizaotli, white wine (tizatl, chalk, hence white, and otli, wine), referred to in this passage, is said by Sahagun to have been drunk especially at the feast of the god Papaztac, one of the many gods of the wine cup. Hist. de Nueva España, Lib. II, App. Tezozomoc mentions it as handed to the mourners at funeral ceremonies. Cronica Mexicana, cap. 55.

3. xochitlalticpacilhuicacpao; in this long compound of xochitl, flower, tlalti, earth, and ilhuicatl, sky, with various postpositions and the euphonic terminal o, the final pa gives the sense of location, towards, in the direction of.

chimalxochitl; "the shield flower," the shield or buckler of the ancient warriors, ornamented with tassels and feathers, is not unaptly called the flower of war.

VIII.

The entire absence in this lament for the dead of any consolation drawn from Christian doctrines, points clearly to a date for its composition earlier than the teachings of the missionaries. Its cry of woe is hopeless, and the title attributes its authorship to one of the old chieftains, tlatoani, who held the power before the Spaniard arrived.

1. quetzalhuahuaciuhtoque, from quetzalli, huaqui; in teintoque, the splinters; the same simile is employed in VII, 2.

2. ximoayan, see note to I, 8. The occurrence of this term here and in verse 3 testifies to the fact of a composition outside of Christian influences.

IX.

The title does not necessarily mean that this song is a translation from the Otomi language, but merely that the time to which it was chanted was in the Otomi style; or, the term Otomi may have reference to the military officer so called. The word is perhaps a compound of otli, path, and mittl, arrow.

The bard sings the vanity of earthly pleasures, and the reality of earthly pains; he exhorts himself and his hearers not to neglect the duties of religion, and lauds his own skill in song, which he compares to the sweet voices of melodious birds. There is nothing in the poem which reflects European influence.

1. xotlacueponi; the meaning of this compound is obscure. It is not found in the dictionaries.

2. The terminal o is inserted several times in the passage to express emotion and fill the metre.

mixitl tlapatl. A phrase signifying the stupor or drunkenness that comes from swallowing or smoking narcotic plants. See Olmos, Grammaire de la Langue Nahuatl, pp. 223, 228; oquiqueo is from i, to drink, or cui, to take, the o terminal being euphonic.

X.

The poet expresses his grief that his songs all dwell on painful topics; he exhorts his hearers of the vanity of fame and skill in handicrafts, and of the uncertainty of life; closing, he appeals especially to those of Tezcuco and Atecpan to listen and believe his warnings.

In spite of the introduction of the Spanish word Dios, and the exhortation to "believe," in the last line, it is possible that the substance of this song was due to purely native inspiration; yet it may have been, like Song XIX, one of those written at an early period for the converts by the missionaries.

XI.

In a similar strain as in the last poem, the bard bewails the briefness of human life and friendships. He closes with an appeal to the Master of Life, of whom no mortal tongue can speak in worthy and appropriate terms.

6. ihuiti, apparently a form of ihuintia.

tonan; the reference appears to be to Tonantzín, Our Mother, otherwise known as Cihuacoatl, the Serpent Woman. She was the mythical mother of the human race, and dispensed afflictions and adverse fortune. See Sahagun, Hist. de la Nueva España, Lib. I, cap. 6. The name is a proof of the antiquity of the poem, which is throughout in the spirit of the ancient religion.

XII.

As stated in the Introduction (§ 10), a note prefixed to this song introduces it as a translation from the Otomi into the Nahuatl tongue. It admirably illustrates the poetic flexibility of the Nahuatl.

3. epoyhuayan, from epoalli, sixty; teoquauhtli ocelotl, "divine eagles, tigers." These terms refer to the warriors bearing these titles.

tlazomaquiztelli, "beloved, precious stones," a figure of speech referring to the youths who go to war. The same or similar metaphors are used in previous songs.

5. The fifth and sixth verses present serious difficulties of construction which I do not flatter myself I have overcome.

XIII.

The inhabitants of Huexotzinco were in frequent strife with those of Mexico-Tenochtitlan, and on various occasions the latter captured many prisoners. The present poem is represented to be a composition of one of these prisoners when he and his companions were confined in Tlatilolco, one of the suburbs of Tenochtitlan. It breathes hatred against his captors and an ardent thirst for vengeance. The latest date at which I find captives from Huexotzinco detained in Mexico is 1511, and it is to this year, therefore, that I assign the composition of the poem.

5. Atloyantepetl; this name possibly means "the mountain of the place of the water-falcons" (atl, water; tlatli, falcon; yan, place-ending; tepetl, mountain). I have not found it in other writers. (See Index.)

8. tlaylotlaqui; Siméon, on the authority of Aubin, explains this term as the name of a tribe living near Tezcucó. In derivation it appears to be a term of contempt, "workers in filth or refuse," scum, offscourings. It also appears in Song XV.

10. The construction of this verse is so obscure, or the text so imperfect, that the translation is doubtful.

XIV.

This poem, chanted in 1551 before the Governor of Azcapotzalco, by Francisco Placido, a native of Huexotzinco, is a Christian song in the style and metre of the ancient poetry. See the Introduction, p. 51.

1. impetlatl; the ordinary meaning of petlatl is a mat or rug; it is here to be taken in its figurative sense of power or authority, chiefs and other prominent persons being provided with mats at the councils, etc.

XV.

This extremely difficult composition seems to be a war song, in which the bard refers to the traditional history of the Nahuas, names some of their most prominent warriors, and incites his hearers to deeds of prowess on the battle field. I do not claim for my version more than a general correspondence to the thought of the original. In several parts, especially verse 18, the text is obviously defective.

1. tzihuactitlan; "the land of the tzihuac bushes." The tzihuactli is a small kind of maguey which grows in rocky localities. The tenth edifice of the great temple at Tenochtitlan was a wall surrounding an artificial rockery planted with these bushes. Sahagun, who mentions this fact, adds that the name of this edifice was Teotlalpan, which literally means "on holy ground." (Hist. de la Nueva España, Lib. II, App.) The mizquitl is the common Mimosa circinalis.

Chicomoztoc; "at the Seven Caves," a famous locality in Mexican legend, and the supposed birthplace of their race.

2. Colhuacan is probably for Acolhuacan; the early rulers of the latter were of the blood of the Chichimec chiefs of the Tepanecas.

4. Hueytlalpan, "at the ancient land," perhaps for Huetlapalan, a locality often referred to in the migration myths of the Nahuas.

5. Atloyan; see note to XIII, 6.

9. The ceiba and cypress trees were employed figuratively to indicate protection and safeguard. See Olmos, Gram. de la Lengua Nahuatl, p. 211.

12. On tlailotlaqui, see note to XIII, 8. The interjectional appendages to this and the following verse are increased.

15. Tepeyacan was the name of a mountain on which before the Conquest was a temple dedicated to the "Mother of our Life," Tonantzin.

16. tlapalcayocan, "the place of shards," of broken pieces, i. e., the field of battle.

19. The word totomihuacan, which has already occurred in vv. 3 and 7, I have translated as referring to the war captains of the Mexican armies, called otomi (see Bandelier, On the Art of War of the Ancient Mexicans, p. 117). I am quite open for correction however.

27. in ipetl icpal; in a translation of an ancient song, Ixtlilxochitl renders the expression in ipetl icpal in teotl, "en el trono y tribunal de Dios," Historia Chichimeca, cap. 32.

29. Mictlan; the place of departed souls in Aztec mythology.

XVI.

In this stirring war-song, the poet reproaches his friends for their lukewarmness in the love of battle. He reminds them that life is transitory, and the dead rise not again, and that the greatest joy of the brave is on the ringing field of fray where warriors win renown. It is in the spirit of the Scotch harper:—

"'Twere worth ten years of peaceful life,
One hour of such a day."

1. Each verse terminates with an interjectional refrain. The frequent introduction of the particle on is intended to add strength and gravity to the oration.

2. oppan piltihua. Compare this expression with that in v. 22, p. 44.

3. xochimicohuayan, should perhaps be translated, "where the captives to be immolated to the Gods are taken." The xochimique, "those destined to a flowery death" were the captives who were reserved for sacrifice to the gods. See Joan Bautista, Sermonario en Lengua Mexicana, p. 180.

4. yaoxochimiquiztica, "pertaining to the slaughter of the flowery war." This adjective refers to the peculiar institution of the "flowery war," guerra florida, which obtained among the ancient Mexicans. It appears to have been a contest without provocation, and merely for the display of prowess and to take captives to supply the demand for human sacrifices in the religious rites. On this see Tezozomoc, Cronica Mexicana, cap. 96.

XVII.

In this long fragment—the closing strophes are missing in my MS.—the bard represents himself as a stranger appearing before the nobles of Huexotzinco at some festival. The first two verses appear to be addressed to him by the nobles. They ask him to bring forth his drum and sing. He begins with a laudation of the power of music, proceeds to praise the noble company present, and touches those regretful chords, so common in the Nahuatl poetry, which hint at the ephemeral nature of all joy and the certainty of death and oblivion. An appeal is made to the Master of Life who inspires the soul of the poet, and whose praises should be ever in mind.

The words Dios and angelotin, in verse 26th, indicate that the poem has received some “recension” by the Spanish copyist; but the general tone impresses me as quite aboriginal in character.

2. quauhtlocelotl, see note to I, 5.

3. In this verse, as frequently elsewhere, the syllable ya is introduced merely to complete the metre. Ordinarily it is the sign of the imperfect tense, and has other meanings (see the Vocabulary), but in many instances does not admit of translation.

8. noncoati, for ni-on-coatl, I am a guest.

18. The references in this verse are obscure, and I doubt if I have solved them.

20. “The house of spring;” compare the expression in v. 1, of Nezahualcoyotl’s song, p. 42.

21. A long oration of Xicontecatli, lord of Tizatlan, may be found in Clavigero, Hist. Antica di Messico, Tom. III, p. 40. The expression in camaxochitzin, from camatl, mouth, xochitl, rose, flower, and the reverential tzin, is noteworthy.

24. petlacoatl, the centipede or scolopender; from petlatl, mat, and coatl, serpent, as they are said to intertwine with each other, like the threads of a mat (Sahagun, Lib. XII, cap. 4).

XVIII.

At this portion of the MS. several poems are preceded by a line of syllables indicating their accompaniment on the teponaztli (see Introduction, p. 32).

The present number is one of the most noteworthy songs of the collection. It belongs to the ancient cyclus of Quetzalcoatl myths, and gives a brief relation of the destruction of Tollan and the departure and disappearance of the Light God, Quetzalcoatl Ce Acatl. As I have elsewhere collated this typical myth at length, and interpreted it according to the tenets of modern mythologic science, I shall not dwell upon it here (see D. G. Brinton, American Hero Myths, Phila., 1882).

The text of the poem is quite archaic, and presents many difficulties. But my translation, I think, gives the general sense correctly.

1. huapalcalli; literally, "the house constructed of beams." This name was applied to the chief temple of the Toltecs; the ruins of an ancient structure at Tollantzinco were pointed out at the time of the Conquest as those of this building (see Sahagun, Hist. de la Nueva España, Lib. X, cap. 29).

coatlaquetzalli; this edifice, said to have been left incomplete by Quetzalcoatl, when he forsook Tollan, had pillars in the form of a serpent, the head at the base, the tail at the top of the pillar. (See Orozco y Berra, Hist. Antigua de Mexico, Tom. III, pp. 30 and 46.) The structure is mentioned as follows in the Anales de Cuauhtitlan:—

"Auhiniquac nemia Quetzalcoatl quitzintica, quipeuahtica iteocal quimaman coatlaquetzali ihuan amo quitzonquixti, amo quipantlaz."

"And when Quetzalcoatl was living, he began and commenced the temple of his which is the Coatlaquetzali (Serpent Plumes), and he did not finish it, he did not fully erect it."

Nacxill Topiltzin, "Our Lord the four-footed." Nacxill appears to have been the name of Quetzalcoatl, in his position as lord of the merchants. Compare Sahagun, ubi supra, Lib. I, cap. 19.

2. Poyauhtecatli, a volcano near Orizaba, mentioned by Sahagun.

Acallan, a province bordering on the Laguna de los Terminos. The myth reported that Quetzalcoatl journeyed to the shores of the Gulf about the isthmus of Tehuantepec and there disappeared.

3. Nonohualco; the reference is to the cerro de Nonoalco, which plays a part in the Quetzalcoatl myth. The words of the song are almost those of Tezcatlipoca when he is introduced to Quetzalcoatl. Asked whence he came, he replied, "Nihuitz in Nonohualcatepetl itzintla, etc." (Anales de Cuauhtitlan).

4. The occurrences alluded to are the marvels performed by Quetzalcoatl on his journey from Tulan. See my American Hero Myths, p. 115.

5. The departure of Quetzalcoatl was because he was ordered to repair to Tlapallan, supposed to be beyond Xicalanco.

8. quinti, for iquintia; the reference is to the magic draught given Quetzalcoatl by Tezcatlipoca.

9. In tetl, in quahuill; literally, "stone and stick;" a very common phrase in Nahuatl, to signify misfortunes.

XIX.

In this song we have avowedly a specimen of an early chant prepared probably by Bishop Zumarraga for the native converts. The accompaniment on the teponaztli is marked at the beginning. The language is noticeably different from the hymn to Quetzalcoatl just given (XVIII).

XX.

Another song of the antique Quetzalcoatl cyclus. It bewails the loss of Tulan, and the bard seeks in vain for any joyous theme to inspire his melody, reflecting on all that has bloomed in glory and now is gone forever.

3. Tetl-quahuill; see note to XVIII, 9.

XXI.

The occurrence to which this poem alludes took place about the year 1507. The chroniclers state that it was in the early period of the reign of Montezuma II, that the natives of Huexotzinco, at that time allies of the Mexicans, were severely harassed by the Tlascallans, and applied, not in vain, to their powerful suzerain to aid them. (See Tezozomoc, Cronica Mexicana, cap. 97.)

The poet does not appear to make a direct petition, but indirectly praises the grandeur of Montezuma and expresses his own ardent love for his native Huexotzinco. The song would appear to be used as a delicate prelude to the more serious negotiations. It is one of the few historical songs in the collection. From the references in verses 1 and 3 we infer that this singer held in his hand the painted book from which he recited the couplets. This may explain the presentation of the piece.

1. huetzcani; one who laughs, a jester, perhaps the designation of one who sang cheerful songs.

chalchiuhatlaquiquizcopa; a word of difficult analysis. I suspect an omission of an l, and that the compound includes llaquilqui, one who fastens and puts together, a mason, etc.

5. The sense is that the warriors of Montezuma when on the field of battle, shine in their deeds like beautiful flowers in a field, and win lasting fame by their exploits.

mopopoyauhtoc. The grammarian Olmos explains the reflexive verb mo-popoyauhtliuh to signify "he leaves an honored memory of his exploits." See Siméon, Dictionnaire de la Langue Nahuatl, sub voce.

7. Huexotzinco atzalan; "Huexotzinco amid the waters." This expression, repeated in verse 8, appears inappropriate to the town of Huexotzinco, which lies inland. In fact, the description in verse 7 applies to Tenochtitlan rather than the singer's own town. But the text does not admit this translation. Perhaps we should read "Huexotzinco and Atzalan," as there are yet two villages of that name in the state of Puebla (which embraced part of ancient Huexotzinco).

10. petiatolini, I have derived from pellall, suspecting an error in transcription. The reference is to the rushes in the mat on which the singer stood.

XXII.

The ordinary sad burden of the Nahuatl poets is repeated with emphasis in this plaint. It is a variation of the Epicurean advice, "Eat, drink, and be merry, for to-morrow we die." Both the sentiment and the reference to Mictlan in verse 7, point it out as a production uninfluenced by Christian teaching.

7. The word ahuicaloyan, place of sweetness, would seem to be identical with ohuicaloyan, place of difficulty, in v. 8; I have regarded the latter as an error of transcription.

XXIII.

Although No. V. is probably one of the lost songs of Nezahualcoyotl, the present is the only one of the collection which is definitely attributed to him. The language is very archaic, and in the sentiment there is every mark of antiquity.

The text is apparently a dialogue, which was chanted as strophe and antistrophe, the one singer speaking for the King, the other for the bard himself.

The word teotl is used for divinity, and it is doubtless this word for which the copyists of some of the other songs have substituted the Spanish Dios, thus conveying an impression that the chants themselves were of late date.

The last verse, however, seems to be by one who lives after the time of the great poet-prince, and is calling him to memory.

XXIV.

It will be seen that there is a wearisome sameness in the theme of most of the short poems. Probably the bards followed conventional models, and feared for the popularity of their products, did they seek originality. Here again are the same delight in flowers and songs, and the same grief at the thought that all such joys are evanescent and that soon "death closes all."

I consider the poem one of undoubted antiquity and purely native in thought and language.

XXV.

The destruction of the Mexican state was heralded by a series of omens and prodigies which took place at various times during the ten years preceding the arrival of Cortes. They are carefully recorded by Sahagun, in the first chapter of the 12th book of his history. They included a comet, or "smoking star," as these were called in Nahuatl, and a bright flame in the East and Southeast, over the mountains, visible from midnight to daylight, for a year. This latter occurred in 1509. The song before us is a bod- ing chant, referring to such prognostics, and drawing from them the inference that the existence of Mexico was doomed. It was probably from just such songs that Sahagun derived his information.

1. toztliyan, I suppose from tozquiltl, the singing voice, in the locative; literally, "the quechol in the place of sweet-singing."

2. iquiapán, from i, possessive prefix, quiauatl, door, entrance, house, pán, in.

5. An obscure verse; tequantepec, appears to be a textual error; tequani, a ravenous beast, from qua to eat; tepec, a mountain; but tequantepehua occurring twice later in the poem induces the belief tequani should be taken in its figurative sense of affliction, destruction, and that tepec is an old verbal form.

7. Xochitecatl, "one who cares for flowers," is said by Sahagun to have been the name applied to a woman doomed to sacrifice to the divinities of the mountains (Hist. Nueva España, Lib. II, cap. 13).

8. amaxtecatl, or amoxtecatl, as the MS. may read, from amoxtli, a book.

XXVI.

This seems to be a song of victory to celebrate an attack upon Atlixco by the ruler of Tezcuco, the famous Nezahualpilli. This monarch died in 1516, and therefore the song must antedate this period, if it is genuine. It has every intrinsic evidence of antiquity, and I think may justly be classed among those preserved from a time anterior to the Conquest. According to the chronologies preserved, the attack of Nezahualpilli upon Atlixco was in the year XI tochtli, which corresponds to 1490, two years before the discovery by Columbus (see Orozco y Berra, Hist. Antigua de Mexico, Tom. III, p. 399).

XXVII.

My MS. closes with a Christian song in the style of the ancient poetry. It is valuable as indicating the linguistic differences between these later productions of the sixteenth century and those earlier ones, such as XXVI, which I have not hesitated to assign to an epoch before the Spaniards landed upon the shores of New Spain.

VOCABULARY.

---

The Roman numerals refer to the songs, the Arabic to the verses, in which the word occurs. Abbreviations: lit., literally; ref., reflexive; pret., preterit; rev., reverential; freq., frequentative; post., postposition; Span., a Spanish word.

A, adv. No, not, in comp.

A, n. For atl, water, in comp.; as acalli, water-house, i. e., a boat.

A, interj. Oh! ah! placed after the word on which stress is laid.

Ac, pron., interj. Who?

Aca, pron. Some, any; somebody.

Acalli, n. A boat, of any kind.

Ach, dubitative particle. Indeed? is it not? etc.

Achitzinca, adv. A little while, a short time.

Achquen, adv. At what time? When?

Aci, v. To reach, to acquire.

Acohuetzi, v. To console, to make glad. I, 3.

Acoquiza, v. To lift up, to raise, to increase in dignity or power.

Acotlaza, v. To console.

Acxoyatl, n. The wild laurel.

Ahauia, v. To rejoice, take pleasure in; freq. of ahuia.

Ahuachia, v. To wet one's self, to bathe. VII, 4.

Ahuachtli, n. Dew, moisture.

Ahuehuetl, n. The cypress tree; Cupressus disticha.

Ahuia, v. To rejoice, to be joyful.

Ahuiaç, adj. Agreeable, pleasant, sweet.

Ahuian, adj. Content, satisfied.

Ahuicpa, adv. From one place to another. III, 3.

Aic, adv. Never.

Altepetl, n. Town, city, citadel.

Amech, pron. rel. You, to you.

Ameyalli, n. A fountain, a stream; lit., flowing water.

Amilli, n. Watered and arable land. XIV, 6.

Amo, adv. No, not; amo ma, no other; amo zannen, not in vain; pron., you, yours.

Amoxpetlatl, n. Book-mat. See XIX, 3.

Amoxtecatl, n. See XXV, 8, note.

An, pron. You.

Ana, v. To take, to grasp, to seize.

Anahuia, v. To be dissatisfied.

Anca, adv. Of the kind that. XVII, 12.

Ane, adv. Hollo! in calling.

Angelotin, n. Angels. Span. XVII, 26.

Ano, adv. As little, neither.

Anozo, conj. Or, perhaps.

Aoc, adv. Not yet.

Apana, v. To clothe.

Apano, v. To ford, to cross water. XVIII, 2.

Aquen, adv. Nothing, in no manner.

Aquin, pron. Who? in aquin, he who.

At, adv. Perhaps, perchance.

Atayahuili, for at aya ueli. Not yet, not even.

Atihuelmati, v. Not to be well. IX, 3.

Atl, n. Water.

Atlamachtia, v. To praise one; ref., to be proud.

Atle, pron. Nothing.

Atley, in atley. Without.

Atonauia, v. To have a fever, to be sick.

Auh, conj. And, even, also.

Axalli, n. Bar-sand, water-sand.

Ay, v. pret. oax. To do, to make.

Aya, adv. Not yet, not now.

Ayacachtli, n. A musical instrument. See p. 24.

Ayahuitl, n. Fog, mist, vapor.

Ayauh cozamlotl, n. The rainbow; lit., "mist of water jewels."

Ayoc, adv. Already not. Ayoctle, nothing more.

Ayoquan, adv. Aoc-ian. Nothing like it, unequaled. XVII, 17.

Ayoquic, adv. Nevermore. V, 6.

Azan, adv. Not a little, not a few.

Azo, conj. Or, perhaps, perchance.

Aztlacapalli, n. The tail feathers of a bird. XVII, 10.

C, pron. rel. He, her, it, him; postpos., with, by, in, from, at.

Ca, adv. Already, yes, because, for, truly, only.

- Ca, v. To be (in a place).
Ca, postpos. With, by, by means of.
Cacali, v. To discharge arrows.
Cacopa, post. Toward, towards.
Cahua, v. To leave, to let, to desert, to stop, to lay down.
Calaquia, v. To enter, to go in.
Calli, n. A house; in comp. cal, as nocal, my house.
Calmecac, n. A public school. p. 10.
Camapantli, n. The cheeks, the face. XXVI, 5.
Camatl, n. The mouth.
Campa, adv. Where, whither.
Can, adv. and postpos. Where.
Canauhtli, n. A duck. XXI, 9.
Canel, adv. Since, as, because.
Caqui, v. To hear, to listen to.
Catlehuatl, pron. Who? which? whoever, whatever.
Catqui, v. irreg. From ca, to be (in a place).
Cauhtehua, v. To leave a place.
Caxtlauitl, n. A kind of ochre. XVII, 10.
Ce, adj. and art. One, a, an.
Cece, or Cecen, adj. Each, every.
Cecemelquixtia, v. To come forth wholly, perfectly. I, 1.
Cecemeltia, v. ref. To rejoice, to feel glad.
Cecemeltic, adj. Complete, whole, entire.
Cecemmana, v. To disperse, to scatter.
Cehuia, v. To rest, to repose.
Cel. Sole only.
Celia, v. 1. To receive, to obtain. 2. To blossom, to bloom.
Cemanahuatl, n. The world, the universe.
Cemelle, adv. With peace or joy. Usually with a negative aic cemelle, never peacefully. XV, 18; XVI, 1.
Cemilhuiltilia, v. To detain one for a day.
Cemilhuitl, n. One day.
Cen, adv. Forever, for always; cen yauh, to go forever, to die.
Cenca, adv. Very much, exceedingly.
Cenci, adv. Elsewhere.
Cenquixtia, v. To select from, to pick from.
Centzontlatolli, n. The mocking bird, Turdus polyglottus; lit., "the myriad-voiced."
Centzontli, adj. num. Four hundred, used for any large number.

- Cepanoa, v. To unite, to join together.
 Chalchihuitl, n. The Mexican jade or green stone; emerald
fig., green; precious.
 Chane, n. Inhabitant or resident of a place.
 Chantli, n. A dwelling, a residence; in comp., chan.
 Chia, v. To wait, to expect.
 Chialoni, n. That which is awaited or expected.
 Chicahuac, adj. Strong, powerful.
 Chichia, v. 1. To make bitter. 2. To obey. XIII, 9.
 Chichina, v. To snuff up, imbibe, or suck up, especially the odors of burning incense, through a tube. VII, 4; XVII, 10.
 Chichinaquiliztli, n. Torment, pain, suffering.
 Chihua, v. To make, to do, to happen; chihua in noyollo, my heart is troubled, I am pained.
 Chimalli, n. The native shield or buckler. VI, 4.
 Chitoni, v. To sparkle, to glitter.
 Chitonia, v. To gain, to realize a profit. V, 4.
 Chittolini, v. To bow down, to sink.
 Choca, v. To cry (of animals and man).
 Ciahui, v. To fatigue one's self, to tire.
 Cihuacoatl, n. A magistrate of high rank; lit., "woman serpent."
 Cihuatl, n. A woman.
 Citlalin, n. A star.
 Co, postpos. In, from.
 Coa, or Cohua, v. To buy, to purchase.
 Cochitia, v. To sleep.
 Cocoa, v. To pain, to give pain.
 Cocolia, v. To hate.
 Cocoya, v. To be sick.
 Cohuatl, or Coatl, n. A serpent; a guest; a twin; the navel; a spade.
 Cohuayotl, n. Buying, purchasing. V, 2.
 Colli, n. Ancestor, forefather.
 Coloa, v. To twist, to turn, to bend.
 Comoni, v. To crackle (of a fire); to be turbulent (of people).
 XXIV.
 Con, pron. Some one; comp. of c and on.
 Copa, postpos. By, toward.
 Copalli, n. Resin, gum copal.
 Coyoua, v. To cry, to yell. XIII, 7.
 Coyohuacan, n. The place of wolves. XIII, 10.

- Coyoltototl, n. The coyol bird, Piranga hepatica.
 Coyotl, n. The coyote, the Mexican wolf.
 Cozcatia, v. To deck with golden chains. IV, 4.
 Cozcatl, n. Jewel, precious stone; a string of such; a chain or collar.
 Cuecuxantia, v. To gather in the folds of the robe.
 Cuecuya, v. To move to and fro. XXI, 9.
 Cuepa, v. To turn, to return, to bring back.
 Cueponi, v. To blossom, to bud, to bloom.
 Cuetlani, v. To wilt, to perish. XV, 15.
 Cuetzpalti, v. To act as a glutton, to revel in. XVII, 5.
 Cuxantli, n. Gown, robe, petticoat.
 Cui, v. To take, to gather, to collect.
 Cuica, n. A song, a poem.
 Cuicani, n. A singer, a poet.
 Cuicoyan, n. A place for singing. See note to p. 10.
 Cuihua, v. Pass. of cui, q. v.
 Cuilia, v. Rev. of cui, q. v.
 Cuiloa, v. To paint, to write.
 Cuiltonoa, v. To be rich; to rejoice greatly; to enrich or cause joy. XV, 6.
 Cuitlatl, n. Excrement, dung.
 Cuix, adv. An interrogative particle.

- Ecacehuaztli, n. A fan.
 Ehecatl, n. Wind, air.
 Ehecayo, adj. Full of wind, stormy.
 Ehua, v. To lift up, especially to raise the voice in singing.
 Elchiquihuitl, n. The breast, the stomach.
 Elchiquihueta, v. To fatigue, to tire. VI, 5.
 Elcicihuilitzli, n. A sigh, a groan.
 Elehuia, v. To desire ardently, to covet.
 Ellaquahua, v. To animate, to inspire.
 Ellelaci, v. To suffer great pain.
 Ellelli, n. Suffering, pain.
 Ellelquixtia, v. To cause joy, to make glad.
 Elletia, v. Ref., to regret, to repent, to abstain; act., to prevent, to hinder, to impede, to cause pain.
 Epoalli, adj. num. Sixty Eztili, n. Blood.

- Huahuaqui, v. To dry up, to wither wholly. VIII, 1.
 Hual, adv. Hither, toward this place.
 Huallauh, v. irreg. To come hither.
 Huan, postpos. In company with; also, a plural termination.
 Huapalcalli, n. Houses of planks. See XVIII, 1.
 Huaqui, v. To dry up, to wither.
 Huecapan, adj. Lofty.
 Huecatlan, adj. Deep, profound.
 Huehuetl, n. A drum. See page 22.
 Huehuetzi, v. freq. To fall often.
 Hueiyotl, n. Greatness, grandeur.
 Huel, adv. Well, good, pleasant.
 Huelic, adj. Sweet, pleasant, fragrant.
 Huelmana, v. To make smooth, or even; to polish, to burnish.
 Huetzcani, n. A jester, a laughter. XXI, 1.
 Huetzi, v. To fall.
 Huetztoc, v. To be stretched out, to be in bed.
 Huey, adj. Great, large.
 Hueyatlan, n. Place of increase, from hueya, to grow greater.
 Huic, postpos. Toward, against.
 Huica, v. To accompany; to carry off; to govern, to rule, to direct.
 Huihuica, v. To follow in crowds, or often.
 Huihuitequi, v. To gather, to pluck.
 Huilohuayan, n. Bourne, goal, terminus; from huiloa, all go.
 Huipana, v. To put in order, to arrange.
 Huitomi, v. To split, to fall. XVIII, 4.
 Huitz, v. To come.
 Huitzitzicatin, n. The humming bird. I, 1.
 Huitzitzilin, n. The humming bird, Trochilus.
 Huitzli, n. A thorn, especially of the maguey.
 Huitztlan, n. The south; huitztlampa, from or to the south.

 I, v. Pret. oic. To drink.
 I, pron. His, her, its, their.
 Ic, conj. For, since, because; prep. With, towards, by, in;
     adv. Where? when? zan ic, as soon as, often, only, on purpose.
 Ica, post. With him, her, it, etc.
 Ica, adv. Sometimes, occasionally.
 Icac, v. To stand upright.

- Icahuaca, v. To sing (of birds).
 Icali, v. To war, to fight. VI, 5.
 Icauhtli, n. Younger brother. VII, 2.
 Icelia, v. To incite another, to devote one's self to.
 Icnelia, v. To do good, to benefit.
 Icnihutli, n. A friend, a companion; tocnihuan, our friends.
 Icnopillabuelilocati, v. To be ungrateful.
 Icnotlamachtia, v. To excite compassion.
 Icpac, postpos. Upon, over.
 Ihuan, conj. And, also.
 Ihui, adv. Of this kind, in this way.
 Ihuinti, v. To intoxicate, to make drunk.
 Ihuitl, n. Feather, plumage.
 Ilacatzui, v. To twist, to twine.
 Ilacatzoa, v. To twine around, to wind about. XV, 2.
 Ilcahua, v. To forget.
 Ilhuia, v. To speak, to say, to tell.
 Ilhuicatl, n. Heaven, the sky.
 Ilnamiquilia, v. To remember, to call to mind.
 Ilpia, v. To bind, to fasten.
 Im. See in.
 Imati, v. To be skillful or wise; to prepare or arrange something skillfully.
 In, art. and pron. He, they, the, which, etc.; in ma oc, meanwhile; in ic, so that, in order that.
 Inaya, v. To confer, to hide. X, 2.
 Inecui, v. To smell something, to perceive an odor. IV, 6.
 Inic, adv. For, in order that, after that.
 Inin, pron. These, they.
 Iniquac, conj. When.
 Inne, conj. But.
 Inoc, adv. While, during.
 Inon, pron. Those.
 Intla, conj. If.
 Intlacamo, adv. Unless, if not.
 Ipalnemoani, n. A name of God. See III, 1, note.
 Ipampa, adv. Because.
 Ipotoctli, n. Smoke, vapor, exhalation.
 Itauhcaoyotl, n. Fame, honor. XVII, 14.
 Ithua, v. To see, for itta. XV, 6.
 Itia, v. 1. To drink; to cause to drink. 2. To suit, to fit.

- Itic, postpos. Within, inside of.
 Itlani, v. To ask, to solicit, to demand.
 Itoa, v. To say, to speak, to tell.
 Itonaliztli, n. Sweat; fig., hard work. VI, 5.
 Itotia, n. To dance in the native fashion.
 Itotiliztli, n. Dance.
 Itta, v. To see, to behold.
 Ittitia, v. To show, to make evident.
 Itzmolini, v. To be born, to sprout, to grow. XX, 4.
 Itztapalli, n. Paving stone. XV, 8.
 Itztoc, v. To watch, to keep awake, to wait for. XVII, 12.
 Ixamayo, adj. Known, recognized. XIII, 2.
 Ixayotl, n. A tear (from the eyes).
 Ixcuitia, v. To take example.
 Iximachoca, n. The knowledge of a person.
 Iximati, v. To know personally.
 Ixitia, v. To awake, to arouse.
 Ixpan, postpos. Before the face of, in presence of.
 Ixquich, adv. As many as.
 Ixtia, v. To face a person, especially the enemy; to watch.
 Ixtlahuatl, n. Open field, savanna, desert.
 Ixtlan, postpos. Before the face of.
 Ixtli, n. Face, visage; eye.
 Iza, v. To awaken, to arouse.
 Izcali, v. To arise, to rise up.
 Izhuatl, n. A leaf of a tree, etc.
 Izhuayo, adj. Leafy, with leaves.
 Izqui, adj., pl. izquintin. As many, so many, all; izqui in quezqui, as many as.
 Iztac, adj. White.
 Iztlacahua, v. To deceive, to cheat.
 Iztlacoa, v. To search for; ref., to take counsel.

 Ma, adv. Sign of optative, subjunctive and vetative; ma oc, yet a while.
 Maca, v. To give, to present.
 Ma ca, neg. Do not.
 Macaic, adv. Never.
 Macazo tlein, neg. No matter, for all that. VI, 2.
 Macehuallotl, n. Servitude, slavery.
 Maceualti, v. defect. To merit; to be happy.

- Macehualtia, v. 1. nino, to make another a vassal, to reduce to vassalage; nite, to give vassals to one; nita, to impose a penance on one.
- Mach, adv. An intensive particle.
- Machtia, v. To cause to know, to teach, to learn.
- Maciui, adv. Although, granted that. XVII, 13.
- Macquaitl, n. The native sword. VI, 4.
- Macuele, adv. Would that—sign of the optative.
- Mahaca, adv. Not, no.
- Mahui, v. To fear, to have fear.
- Mahuizti, v. To be esteemed, to be honored.
- Maitl, n. The hand, the arm. In comp. ma, as noma, my hand.
- Malacachoa, v. To twine, to fold. XVI, 4.
- Malhuia, v. To regale, to treat well, to take care of.
- Malina, v. To twine, to wreath.
- Malintih, v. To twine, to twist, to enwreath.
- Mamalia, v. To carry.
- Mamalli, v. To enter, to penetrate. XII, 4.
- Mamana, v. To arrange a feast, to set in order. XV, 15.
- Mamani, v. See Mani.
- Mana, v. To offer offerings. XVII, 3.
- Manca, v. Imp. of Mani.
- Manen, neg. That not, that it does not happen, etc.
- Mani, v. To be (of broad or wide things); to be stretched out.
- Manozo, adv. Or, if.
- Maquiztli, n. A bracelet or other ornament of the arm. III, 5.
- Mati, v. To know. Ref., to think, to reflect; qui-mati noyollo, I presume, I doubt; nonno-mati, I attach myself to a person or thing.
- Matiloa, v. To anoint, to rub.
- Mazo, adv. Although.
- Meya, v. To flow, to trickle.
- Miahuatototl, n. A bird. IV, 2.
- Micohuani, adj. Mortal, deadly.
- Miec, adv. Much, many.
- Milli, n. Cultivated field.
- Miqui, v. To die, to kill.
- Miquitlani, v. To desire death. X, 1.
- Mitz, pron. Thee, to thee.
- Mixitl, n. A narcotic plant. See tlapatl. IX, 2.
- Mixtecomatl, n. A dark night, a dark place. III, 4.

Mizquitl, n. The mesquite. XV, 1.

Mo, pron. 1. Thy, thine; 2. Pron. ref. 3 sing., he, him, they, them.

Mochi, adj. All.

Mochipa, adv. Always.

Moliniani, n. One who moves, or agitates. XVI, 3.

Momolotza, v. To cause to foam, to cut to pieces. XII, 3.

Motelchiuh, n. The governor of Tenochtitlan. XIII, 8.—See telchihua.

Motla, v. To throw, to fall. I, 1.

Motlali, adj. Seated, placed, in repose.

Moyaua, v. To conquer; to become cloudy or troubled (of water); to talk about; to boast.

Moztla, adv. To-morrow.

Nahuac, postpos. Toward, by, along, near to.

Nahui, adj. num. Four.

Nalquixtia, v. To cause to penetrate, causative of nalquiza, to penetrate.

Nananquilia, v. To answer, to reply to.

Nantli, n. Mother, tonan, our mother, etc.

Nauhcampa, adv. In four directions, to four places.

Ne, pron. Reflexive pronoun 3d person in verbal substantives and impersonal verbs.

Ne, pron. for nehuatl. I, me.

Necaliztli, n. Battle, combat.

Nech, pron. Me, to me.

Nechca, adv. There, down there; like the French là-bas; oc ye nechca, formerly, once.

Neci, v. To appear, to show one's self or others.

Neco, v. Pass. of nequi, q. v.

Nectia, v. To desire, to wish for.

Necuiltonolli, n. Riches, possessions.

Neicaloloyan, n. The field of battle.

Neiximachoyan, n. A place where one is taught. XIII, 1.

Nel, adv. But.

Nelhuayotl, n. A root; fig., principle, foundation, essence.

Nelihui, adv. It is thus, even thus; mazo nelihui, though it be thus.

Nelli, adv. Truly, verily.

Neloa, v. To mingle, to shake, to beat.

- Neltia, v. To verify, to make true.
 Nemactia, v. 1. To receive, to obtain. 2. To give, to grant.
 Nemayan, adv. In the course of the year. XII, 3.
 Nemi, v. To live, to dwell, to walk.
 Nemoa, v. impers. To live, to dwell.
 Nen, adv. Vainly, in vain.
 Nenchiua, v. To do in vain.
 Nenectia, v. To obtain by effort. XII, 4.
 Neneliuhtica, adj. Mixed up, mingled together.
 Neneloa, v. To mix, to mingle.
 Nenepanoa, v. freq. To mix, to mingle. XVII, 1.
 Nenequi, v. To act tyrannically; to feign; to covet. XI, 7.
 Nennemi, v. To wander about.
 Nenonotzalcuicatl, n. A song of exhortation.
 Nentaci, v. To fail, to come to naught. XVII, 13, 14.
 Nentlamachtia, v. ref. To afflict one's self, to torment one's self.
 Nentlamati, v. To be afflicted, disconsolate.
 Nepa, adv. Here, there. Ye nepa, a little further, beyond. XXI,
 6. Oc nepa, further on.
 Nepaniui, v. To join, to unite.
 Nepantla, postpos. In the midst of.
 Nepapan, adj. Various, diverse, different.
 Nepohualoyan, n. The place where one is reckoned, read, or counted. VI, 2.
 Nequi, v. To wish, to desire.
 Netlamachtiliztli, n. Riches, property.
 Netlamachtilyan, n. A prosperous place. IV, 6; VII, 4.
 Netlanehuihuia, v. To have an abundance of all things. XXVI, 1.
 Netotiliztli, n. Dance, dancing.
 Netotilyan, n. Place of dancing.
 Ni, pron. pers. 1. Before a vowel, n.
 Nican, adj. Here, hither.
 Nihui, adv. From no-ihui, thus, of the same manner. XVIII, 3.
 Niman, adv. Soon, promptly.
 Nino, pron. ref. I myself.
 Nipa, adv. Here, in this part, there.
 No, adv. Also, like. no yuh, in the same way, thus. Pron. My, mine.
 Noca, pron. For me, for my sake, by me.
 Nohuan, pron. With me.
 Nohuiampa, adv. In all directions, on all sides.

- Nohuian, adv. Everywhere, on all sides.
 Nonoyan, n. Place of residence. V, 2.
 Nonotza, v. To consult, to take counsel, to reflect.
 Notza, v. To call some one.
 Nozan, adv. Even yet, and yet, to this day.

 Obispo, n. Bishop. Span. XIX, 4.
 Oc, adv. Yet, again; oc achi, yet a little; oc achi ic, yet more, comparative; oc pe, first, foremost.
 Ocelotl, n. The tiger; a warrior so called. See note to I, 5.
 Ocoxochitl, n. A fragrant mountain flower. III, 2.
 Octicatl, n. See note to VII, 1.
 Octli, n. The native wine from the maguey. In comp., oc.
 Ohuaga, interj. Oh! alas!
 Ohui, adj. Difficult, dangerous.
 Ohuicaloyan, n. A difficult or dangerous place. XXII, 7.
 Ohuican, n. A difficult or dangerous place.
 Ome, adj. Two.
 Omitl, n. A bone.
 Ompa, adv. Where.
 On, adv. A euphonic particle, sometimes indicating action at a distance, at other times generalizing the action of the verb.
 Oncan, adv. There, thither.
 Onoc, v. To be lying down.
 Oppa, adv. A second time, twice.
 Oquichtli, n. A male, a man.
 Otli, n. Path, road, way.
 Otomitl, n. An Otomi; a military officer so called.
 Otoncuicatl, n. An Otomi song. II, 1.

 Pachiui noyollo, v. I am content, satisfied. IX, 2.
 Pacqui, v. To please, to delight.
 Pactli, n. Pleasure, joy.
 Pal, postpos. By, by means of.
 Pampa, postpos. For, because.
 Pan, postpos. Upon; apan, upon the water.
 Papalotl, n. The butterfly.
 Papaqui, v. To cause great joy.
 Patiuhitli, n. Price, wages, reward.
 Patlahuac, adj. Large, spacious.
 Patlani, v. To fly.

- Pehua, v. Pret., opeuh, to begin, to commence.
 Pepetlaca, v. To shine, to glitter.
 Pepetlaquiltia, v. To cause to shine.
 Petlacoatl, n. The scolopender, the centipede. XVII, 24.
 Petlatl, n. A mat, a rug (of reeds or flags); fig., power, authority.
 Petlatotlin, n. A rush suitable to make mats. XXI, 10.
 Petlaua, v. To polish, to rub to brightness.
 Peuhcayotl, n. Beginning, commencement.
 Pilihui, v. To fasten to, to mingle with. XXI.
 Pilihuitl, n. Beloved child. XII, 3.
 Pilli, n. Son, daughter, child. A noble, a chief, a ruler, a lord.
     Tepilhuan, the children, the young people. Nopiltzin, my lord.
 Piloa, v. To hang down, to suspend.
 Piltihua, v. To be a boy, to be young.
 Pipixau, v. To snow, to rain heavily.
 Pixau, v. To snow, to rain.
 Pochotl, n. The ceiba tree; fig., protector, chief.
 Pochtli, n. Smoke, vapor, fog, mist.
 Poloa, v. To destroy; to perish.
 Popoloa, v. Freq. of poloa.
 Popoyauhtih, v. To leave a glorious memory. XXI, 5.
 Poxahua, v. To work the soil, to labor.
 Poyaua, v. To color, to dye. XVII, 21.
 Poyau, v. To become clear, to clear off.
 Poyomatl, n. A flower like the rose. IV, 6.
 Pozoni, v. To boil, to seethe; fig., to be angry.
- Qua, v. To eat.
 Quahtla, n. Forest, woods.
 Quahuatl, n. A tree; a stick; fig., chastisement.
 Quaitl, n. Head, top, summit.
 Qualani, v. To anger, to irritate.
 Qualli, adj. Good, pleasant.
 Quatlapana, v. To break one's head; to suffer much.
 Quauhltli, n. The eagle; a warrior so called; bravery, distinction. I, 5.
 Quemach, adv. Is it possible!
 Quemmach amique, rel. Those who are happy, the happy ones.
 IX, 2.
 Quenami, adv. As, the same as.

- Quenami can, adv. As there, the same as there, sometimes with on euphonic inserted, quenonami.
 Quenin, adj. How, how much.
 Quennel, adv. What is to be done? What remedy?
 Quennonamican. See under quenami.
 Quequentia, v. To clothe, to attire.
 Quetza, v. Nino, to rise up; to unite with; to aid; nite, to lift up.
 Quetzalli, n. A beautiful feather; fig., something precious or beautiful.
 Quetzaltototl, n. A bird; Trogon pavoninus.
 Quexquich, pron. So many as, how much.
 Qui, pron. rel. He, her, it, they, them.
 Quiauatl, n. Entrance, door. XVII, 18.
 Quiauitl, n. Rain, a shower.
 Quimiloa, v. To wrap up, to clothe, to shroud the dead. XI, 6.
 Quin, pron. rel. They, then.
 Quiquinaca, v. To groan, to buzz, etc.
 Quiquizoa, v. To ring bells. IV, 3.
 Quiza, v. To go forth, to emerge.
 Quizqui, adj. Separated, divided.
 Quiztiquiza, v. To go forth hastily. XXII.

 Tapalcayoa, v. To be full of potsherds and broken bits. XV, 16.
 Tatli, n. and v. See p. 19.
 Te, pron. pers. 1. Thou. 2. Pron. rel. indef. Somebody.
 Teahuiaca, adj. Pleasing, agreeable.
 Teca, pron. Of some one; te and ca.
 Teca, v. To stretch out, to sleep; to concern one's self with.
Moteca, they unite together.
 Tech, postpos. In, upon, from. Pron. Us.
 Tecocolia, n. A hated person, an enemy.
 Tecomapiloa, n. A musical instrument. See p. 23.
 Tecpilli, n. Nobleman, lord.
 Tecpillotl, n. The nobility; noble bearing, courtesy.
 Tehuan, pron. 1. We. 2. With some one.
 Tehuatl, pron. Thou.
 Teini, v. To break, to fracture.
 Tel, conj. But, though.
 Telchihua, v. To detest, to hate, to curse.
 Tema, v. To place something somewhere.
 Temachia, v. To have confidence in, to expect, to hope for.

- Temi, v. To be filled, replete; to be stretched out. XXVI, 4.
 Temiqui, v. To dream.
 Temo, v. To descend, to let fall.
 Temoa, v. To search, to seek.
 Tenamitl, n. A town; the wall of a town.
 Tenuauac, post. With some one, near some one.
 Tenmati, v. To be idle, negligent, unfortunate.
 Tenquixtia, v. To speak forth, to pronounce, to declare.
 Tenyotl, n. Fame, honor.
 Teoatl, n. Divine water. See VI, 4, note.
 Teocuitla, n. Gold, of gold.
 Teobua, n. A priest. XVII, 19.
 Teoquechol, n. A bird of beautiful plumage.
 Teotl, n. God, divinity.
 Teoxihuitl, n. Turquoise; fig., relation, ruler, parent.
 Tepacca, adj. Causing joy, pleasurable.
 Tepeitic, n. Narrow valley, glade, glen.
 Tepetl, n. A mountain, a hill.
 Tepeua, v. To spread abroad, to scatter, to conquer. XV, 3.
 Teponaztli, n. A drum. See p. 22.
 Tepopoloani, v. To slay, to slaughter.
 Tequani, n. A wild beast, a savage person.
 Tequi, v. To cut.
 Tetecuica, v. To make a loud noise, to thunder. XX, 7.
 Tetl, n. A stone, a rock. In comp., te.
 Tetlamacti, n. That which enriches, glorifies, or pleases.
 Tetlaquauac, adj. Hard or strong as stone. Comp. of tetl and llaquauac.
 Tetozacatemo, v. To let fall or throw forth notes of singing. I, 2.
 Tetzilacatl, n. A copper gong. XVII, 21. See p. 24.
 Teuctli, n., pl. teteuctin. A noble, a ruler, a lord; in teteuctin, the lords, the great ones.
 Teucyotl, n. Nobility, lordship.
 Teuh, postpos. Like, similar to.
 Teuhyotl, n. Divinity, divineness.
 Teyolquima, adj. Pleasing, odorous, sweet.
 Teyotl, n. Fame, honor.
 Ti, pron. 1. thou; timo, ref.; tic, act. 2. we; tito, ref.; tic, act.
 Tilani, v. To draw out.
 Tilini, v. To crowd, to press. XVII, 19.
 Timaloa, v. To glorify, to exalt, to praise.

- Timo, pron. ref. Thou thyself.
 Tito, pron. ref. We ourselves.
 Tizaitl, n. Chalk; anything white; an example or model.
 Tizaotli, n. White wine. See VII, 2.
 Tla, adv., for intla, if; pron. indef., something, anything; postpos. in abundance.
 Tlacace, interj. Expressing astonishment or admiration. XVII, 3.
 Tlacahui, v. To hear, to understand.
 Tlacateuctli, n. A sovereign, a ruler.
 Tlacati, v. To be born.
 Tlacatl, n. Creature, person.
 Tlacazo, adv. Truly, certainly.
 Tlachia, v. To see, to look upon.
 Tlachihual, n. Creature, invention.
 Tlachinolli, n. Battle, war; from chinoa, to burn.
 Tlacoa, v. To injure, to do evil, to sin.
 Tlacochtli, n. The arrow.
 Tlacocoa, v. To buy, to purchase. X, 1.
 Tlacoqua, v. To buy, to purchase.
 Tlacoqua, v. To beat, to chastise.
 Tlacotli, n. A servant, slave.
 Tlacouia, v. To split, to splinter.
 Tlacuiloa, v. To inscribe, to paint in, to write down.
 Tlaelehuiani, adj. Desirous of, anxious for.
 Tlahuelli, n. Anger, ire.
 Tlahuica, n. Servant, page; also, a native of the province of Tlahuican. (See Index.)
 Tlailotlaqui, n. "Workers in filth;" scum; a term applied in contempt. XIII, 8; XV, 12, 14. Also a proper name. (See Index.)
 Tlalaquia, v. To bury, to inter.
 Tlalli, n. Earth, ground; tlalticpac, on the earth.
 Tlalnamiqi, v. To think of, to remember.
 Tlalpiloni, n. An ornament for the head. VI, 4, from ilpia.
 Tlamachti, v. ref. To be rich, happy, prosperous.
 Tlamahuizolli, n. Miracle, wonder.
 Tlamatilloli, n. Ointment; anything rubbed in the hands. XI, 9.
 Tlamatqui, adj. Skillful, adroit.
 Tlamattica, adj. Calm, tranquil.
 Tlamelaucayotl, n. A plain or direct song. II, 1.
 Tlami, v. To end, to finish, to come to an end.

- Tlamomoyaua, v. To scatter, to destroy. XV, 21.
Tlan, postpos. Near to, among, at.
Tlaneci, v. To dawn, to become day. Ye tlaneci, the day breaks.
Tlanehuia, v. Nicno. To revel, to indulge one's self in. XXI, 8.
Tlaneltoaca, v. To believe in, to have faith in.
Tlania, v. To recover one's self, to return within one's self.
Tlaniicza, v. To abase, to humble. IX, 3.
Plantia, v. To terminate, to end.
Tlaocol, adj. Sad, melancholy, pitiful, merciful.
Tlaocolia, v. To be sad, etc.
Tlaocoltatzia, v. To cry aloud with grief. I, 3.
Tlapalhuia, v., rel. To be brilliant or happy; act., to salute a person; to paint something.
Tlapalli, n. and adj. Colored; dyed; red.
Tlapaloa, v. To salute, to greet.
Tlapanahuia, adj. Surpassing, superior, excellent; used to form superlatives.
Tlapani, v. To dye, to color. XVII, 10.
Tlapapalli, adj. Striped, in stripes.
Tlapatl, n. The castor-oil plant; the phrase mixitl tlapatl means stupor, intoxication. IX, 2.
Tlapepetlani, v. To sparkle, to shine forth.
Tlapitza, v. Fr. pítza, to play the flute. XVII, 26.
Tlaqualli, n. Food, eatables.
Tlaquauac, adj. Strong, hard.
Tlaquauh, adj. Strongly, forcibly.
Tlaquilla, adj. Stopped up, filled. XX, 4.
Tlaquilqui, n. One who plasters, a mason. XXI, 1.
Tlatemmati, v. To suffer afflictions.
Tlatenehua, v. To promise.
Tlathui, v. To dawn, to become light.
Tlatia, v. 1. To hide, to conceal; 2. to burn, to set on fire.
Tlatlamantitica, adj. Divided, separated.
Tlatlatoa, v. To speak much or frequently. XVII, 11.
Tlatlauhtia, v. To pray. XVI, 3.
Tlatoani, n. Ruler, lord.
Tlatocayotl, n. The quality of governing or ruling.
Tlatolli, n. Word, speech, order.
Tlatzihui, v. To neglect, to be negligent; to be abandoned, to lie fallow; to leave, to withdraw.
Tlauantli, n. Vase, cup. XXVI, 4.

- Tlahquechol, n. A bird, the red heron, Platalea ajaja.
 Tlauillotl, n. Clearness, light. X, 1.
 Tlaxillotia, v. To arrange, sustain, support. IX, 4.
 Tlaxixinia, v. To disperse, to destroy.
 Tlayaua, v. To make an encircling figure in dancing.
 Tlayualolli, adj. Encircled, surrounded. XXI, 6.
 Tlaylotlaqui, n. See XIII, 8.
 Tlayocolia, v. To make, to form, to invent. XIV.
 Tlayocoyalli, n. Creature, invention.
 Tlaza, v. To throw away; fig., to reject, to despise.
 Tlazotla, v. To love, to like.
 Tle, pron. int. and rel. What? That.
 Tleahua, v. To set on fire, to fire.
 Tlein, pron., int. and rel. What? That.
 Tleinmach, adv. Why? For what reason?
 Tlenamactli, n. Incense burned to the gods. III, 1.
 Tlepetztic, adj. Shining like fire, tlell, petztic. XV, 26.
 Tletl, n. Fire.
 Tleymach, adv. Why? Wherefore?
 Tleyotl, n. Fame, honor.
 Tlezannen, adv. To what good? Cui bono?
 Tliliuhqui, adj. Black, brown.
 Tliliui, v. To blacken, to paint black. XII, 6.
 Tloc, postpos. With, near to.
 Tloque nahuaque, n. A name of divinity. See I, 6, note.
 To, pron. posses. Our, ours.
 Toca, v. To follow.
 Toci, n. "Our ancestress," a divinity so called.
 Toco, v. Impers. of toca.
 Tohuan, pron. With us.
 Tolinia, v. To be poor, to be unfortunate.
 Tolquatectitlan, n. The place where the head is bowed for lustration. III, 1.
 Toma, v. To loosen, to untie, to open. XVII, 3.
 Tomahuac, adj. Great, heavy, large.
 Tonacati, v. To be prosperous or fertile.
 Tonacatlalli, n. Rich or fertile land.
 Tonameyo, adj. Shining like the sun, glittering.
 Tonameyotl, n. Ray of the sun, light, brilliancy.
 Tonatiuh, n. The sun.
 Toneua, v. To suffer pain; nite, to inflict pain.

- Toquichpohuan, n. Our equals. I, 3.
 Tototl, n. A bird, generic term.
 Tozmilini, adj. Sweet voiced. XXI, 3.
 Toznenetl, n. A parrot, Psittacus signatus.
 Tozquitl, n. The singing voice, p. 21.
 Tzalan, postpos. Among, amid.
 Tzatzia, v. To shout, to cry aloud.
 Tzauhqui, v. To spin. XVII, 22.
 Tzetzeliui, v. To rain, to snow; fig., to pour down.
 Tzihuac, n. A species of bush. XV, 1.
 Tzimiquiliztli, n. Slaughter, death. XVI, 5.
 Tzinitzcan, n. A bird, Trogon Mexicanus.
 Tzitzilini, n. A bell.
 Tzotzona, v. To strike the drum.

 Uallaui, v. To come. See huallaui.
 Uitz, v. To come.
 Ulli, n. Caoutchouc. See p. 22.

 Xahua, v. To paint one's self, to array one's self in the ancient manner. XXIV, 1.
 Xamani, v. To break, to crack.
 Xaxamatza, v. To cut in pieces, to break into bits.
 Xayacatl, n. Face, mask.
 Xelihui, v. To divide, to distribute.
 Xexeloa, v. To divide, to distribute.
 Xilotl, n. Ear of green corn.
 Xiloxochitl, n. The flower of maize. XVII, 10.
 Ximoayan, n. A place of departed souls. See I, 8.
 Ximohuayan, n. Place of departed spirits. VIII, 1.
 Xiuhtototl, n. A bird, Guiraca cerulea.
 Xiuitl, n. A leaf, plant; year; anything green.
 Xochicalli, n. A house for flowers, or adorned with them.
 Xochimecatl, n. A rope or garland of flowers.
 Xochimicohuayan, n. See XVI, 3, note.
 Xochitecatl, n. See XXV, 7, note.
 Xochitl, n. A flower, a rose.
 Xochiyaotl, n. Flower-war. See XVI, 4, note.
 Xocomiqui, v. To intoxicate, to become drunk.
 Xocoya, v. To grow sour. XIII, 4.
 Xopaleuac, n. Something very green.

Xopan, n. The springtime.

Xotla, v. To blossom, to flower; to warm, to inflame; to cut, to scratch, to saw.

Xoxoctic, adj. Green; blue. XVI, 6.

Xoyacaltitlan, n. The house or place of decay. III, 1.

Y. Abbrev. for ihuan, and in, q. v.

Ya, adv. Already, thus; same as ye; v., to suit, to fit. Part. euphonic or expletive. See note to XVII, 3.

Yan, postpos. Suffix signifying place.

Yancuic, adj. New, fresh, recent.

Yancuican, adv. Newly, recently.

Yaotl, n. War, battle.

Yaoyotl, n. Warfare.

Yaqui, adj. Departed, gone, left for a place.

Yauh, v., irreg. To go.

Ye, adv. Already, thus; ye no ceppa, a second time; ye ic, already, it is already.

Ye, pron. He, those, etc.

Ye, adj. num. Three.

Yece, adv. But.

Yecen, adv. Finally, at last.

Yecnemi, v. To live righteously.

Yecoa, v. To do, to finish, to conclude.

Yectenehua, v. To bless, to speak well of.

Yectli, adj. Good, worthy, noble.

Yehuatl, pron. He, she, it. Pl. yehuan, yehuantin.

Yehua, v. To beg, to ask charity.

Yeppa yuhqui. Formerly, it was there. VII, 2.

Yhuintia. See ihuinti.

Yocatl, n. Goods, possessions; noyocauh, my property. XV, 26.

Yocaua, n. Master, possessor, owner.

Yocolia, v. To form, to make.

Yocoya, v. To make, to invent, to create.

Yohuatli, n. Night, darkness.

Yolahuia, v. To rejoice greatly.

Yolciahuia, v. To please one's self, to make glad.

Yolcucuechoa, v. To make the heart tremble. IV, 6.

Yolehua, v. To excite, to animate.

Yolihuayan, n. A place of living. III, 5.

Yollo, adj. Adroit, skillful; also for iyollo, his heart.

Yollotl, v. Heart, mind, soul.

Yolnonotza, v. See note to I, 1.

Yolpoxahua, v. To toil mentally.

Yuhqui, adv. As, like.

Yuhquimati, v. To understand, to realize.

Zacatl, n. Herbage, straw, hay. XXI, 5.

Zacuan, n. Feather of the zacuan bird; fig., yellow; prized.

Zacuan tototl, n. The zacuan bird, Oriolus dominicensis.

Zan, adv. Only, but; zan cuel, in a short time; zanen, perhaps;

Zan nen, in vain.

Zancuel achic, adv. A moment, an instant; often; zan ye, but again, but quickly.

Zanio, pron. I alone, he or it alone.

Zoa, v. To pierce; to spread out; to open; to sew; to string together; to put in order.

Zolin tototl, n. The quail.

Zoma, v. To become angry.

Zomale, adj. For comalli, vase, cup. XXVI, 4.

INDEX

OF NAHUATL PROPER NAMES, WITH EXPLANATIONS.

- ACALLAN, 105. "The place of boats," from acalli, boat. An ancient province at the mouth of the Usumacinta river; but the name was probably applied to other localities also.
- ACATLAPAN, 41. A village southeast of Chalco. From acatla, a place of reeds, and pan, in or at.
- ACHALCHIUHTLANEXTIN, 46. The first chief of the Toltecs; another form of chalchiuhtnac. Both names mean "the gleam of the precious jade." Compare Torquemada, Monarquía Indiana. Lib. III., cap. 7; Orozco y Berra, Hist. Antigua de Mexico, Tom. III., p. 42. The date of the beginning of his reign is put at A.D. 667 or 700.
- ACOLHUACAN, 40, 91, 119. A compound of atl, water, and colhuacan, (q. v.) = "Colhuacan by the water," the name of the state of which Tetzcuco was the capital, in the valley of Mexico.
- ACOLMIZTLAN, 89, from
- ACOLMIZTLI, 35. A name of Nezahualcoyotl (see p. 35), also of other warriors.
- ANAHUAC, 125. From atl, water, nahuac, by, = the land by the water. The term was applied first to the land by the lakes in the Valley of Mexico, and later to that along both the Gulf of Mexico and the Pacific Ocean.
- ATECPAN, 77. "The royal residence by the water" (atl, tecpan). I do not find this locality mentioned elsewhere.
- ATLIXCO, 125. "Where the water shows its face" (atl, ixtli, co). A locality southeast of Tezcuco, near the lake, so called from a large spring. See Motolinia, Historia de los Indios, Trat. III., cap. 18.
- ATLOYANTEPETL, 85, 89, 91. Perhaps for atlanantepetl, "the mountain that rules the waters." But see note to xiii, v. 6.
- ATZALAN, 114. "Amid the waters" (atl, tzalan). Perhaps not a proper name; but two villages in the present State of Puebla are called Atzala (see Orozco y Berra, Geografía de las Lenguas de Mexico, pp. 212, 213).
- AXAXACATZIN, 43. Probably for axayacatzin, reverential of axayacatl, the name of a species of marsh fly. It was also the name of the sixth ruler of Mexico (flor. about 1500), and doubtless of other distinguished persons. See Ixtlilxochitl, Historia Chichimeca, cap. 51.
- AZCAPOTZALCO, 50, 51. An ancient town in the valley of Mexico, once the capital city of the Tepanecas (q. v.). The word means "place of the ant-hills," from azcaputzalli.
- AZTECS, 25. A Nahuatl tribe who derived their name from their mythical ancient home, Aztlan. The derivation is obscure, but probably is from

- the same radical as iztac, white, and, therefore, Father Duran was right in translating Aztlan, "place of whiteness," the reference being to the East, whence the Aztecs claim to have come. See Duran, Historia de las Indias, cap. II.
- CACAMATL, 94, 95. The reference appears to be to Cacamatzin (the Noble Sad One, from cacamaua, fig. to be sad), last ruler of Tezcuco, son and successor, in 1516, of Nezahualpilli. He was put to death by Cortes.
- CATOCIH, 89. A doubtful word, which may not be a proper name.
- CHALCO, 16, 69, 95. A town and lake in the valley of Mexico. The people were Nahuas and subject to Mexico. The word is probably derived from Challi, with the postpos. co, meaning "at the mouth" (of a river). See Buschmann, Ueber die Aztekischen Ortsnamen, s. 689, and comp. Codex Ramirez, p. 18.
- CHIAPA, CHIAPANECA, 70, 71. The province and inhabitants of Chiapas, in Southern Mexico. There were colonies of Nahuas in Chiapas, though most of the natives spoke other tongues. The derivation is probably from chia, a mucilaginous seed highly esteemed in Mexico.
- CHICHIMECATL or CHICHIMECS, 88, 89, 91, 101. A rude hunting tribe, speaking Nahuatl, who settled, in early times, in the valley of Mexico. The name was said to be derived from chichi, a dog, on account of their devotion to hunting (Cod. Ramirez). Others say it was that of their first chieftain.
- CHICOMOTOC, 88, 89. "At the seven caves," the name of the mythical locality from which the seven Nahuatl tribes derived their origin. The Codex Ramirez explains the seven caves to mean the seven houses or lineages (totems) of which the nation consisted.
- CHILILITL, 36. Name of a tower of sacred import. It is apparently a compound of chia or chielia, to watch, and tlilli, blackness, obscurity, hence "a night watch-tower." It was probably used for the study of the sky at night.
- CHIMALPOPOCA, 43. "The smoking shield," from chimalli, shield, and popoca. The name of several distinguished warriors and rulers in ancient Mexico.
- CHOLULA or CHOLOLLAN, 105. Name of a celebrated ancient state and city. From choloa, with the probable meaning, "place of refuge," "place of the fugitives."
- CIHUAPAN, 41. Name of a warrior, otherwise unknown. From cihuatl, woman, pan, among, with.
- COATZITEUCTLI, 89. A name compound of coatzin, reverential form of coatl, serpent, and teuctli, lord.
- COLHUA. A people of Nahuatl affinity, who dwelt in ancient times in the valley of Mexico. See Colhuacan.
- COLHUACAN, 88, 89, 91. A town in the valley of Mexico. In spite of the arguments to the contrary, I believe the Colhua were of Nahuatl lineage,

- and that the name is derived from colli, ancestor; colhuacan, the residence of the ancestors; with this signification, it was applied to many localities. It must be distinguished from Acolhuacan. Its ikonomatic symbol was a hill bent over at the top, from coloa, to bend.
- COLZAZTLI, 39. Probably for Colzatztl, one who cries out or calls to the ancestors (colli, tatzia). A chief whom I have not found elsewhere mentioned.
- CONAHUATZIN, 41. A warrior not elsewhere mentioned. By derivation it means "noble son of the lord of the water" (conetl, ahua, tzin).
- CUETZPALTZIN, 89. A proper name, from cuetzpalli, the 4th day of the month.
- CUEXTLA, 33. A province of ancient Mexico. See Torquemada, Monarquia Indiana. Lib. II, caps. 53, 56.
- CULTEPEC, 42. A village five leagues from Tezcucó, at the foot of the mountains. Deriv., colli, ancestor, tepell, mountain or town, with postpos. c; "at the town of the ancestors."
- HUETLALPAN or HUETLAPALAN, 89. The original seat of the mythical Toltecs. The name is a compound of hue, old, and Tlapallan, q. v.
- HUEXOTZINCO, 50, 83, 91, 99, 113. An independent State of ancient Anahuac, south of Tlascala and west of Cholula. The name means "at the little willow woods," being a diminutive from huexalla, place of willows.
- HUITLALOTZIN, 89. From huitlallotl, a species of bird, with the reverential termination. Name of a warrior.
- HUITZILAPOCHTLI, 16. Tribal god of the Mexicans of Tenochtitlan. The name is usually derived from huitzitlin, humming bird, and opochtli, left (Cod. Ramirez, p. 22), but more correctly from huitztli, the south, iloa, to turn, opochtli, the left hand, "the left hand turned toward the south," as this god directed the wanderings of the Mexicans southward. The humming bird was used as the "ikonomatic" symbol of the name.
- HUITZILIHUITL, 89. "Humming-bird feather." Name of an ancient ruler of Mexico, and of other warriors.
- HUITZNAHUACATL, 91. A ruler of Huexotlan (Clavigero); a member of the Huitznahua, residents of the quarters so called in Tezcucó and Tenochtitlan (Ixtlilxochitl, Hist. Chichimeca, cap. 38).
- IXTLILXOCHITL, 35, 46, 89. A ruler of Acolhuacan, father of Nezahualcoyotl. Comp. ixtli, face, tlilxochitl, the vanilla (literally, the black flower).
- IZTACCOYOTL, 89, 93. "The white wolf." Name of a warrior otherwise unknown.
- MEXICANS, 67, 83, 85, 87, 123, 125. See
- MEXICO, 83, 123. Name of the town and state otherwise called Tenochtitlan. Mexitl was one of the names of the national god Huitzilopochtli, and Mexico means "the place of Mexitl," indicating that the - city was originally called from a fane of the god.

- MITLAN, 95, 117, 119. The Mexican Hades, literally, "the place of the dead."
- MONTEZUMA, 14, 41, 113. The name of the ruler of Mexico on the arrival of Cortes. The proper form is Moteuhzomatzin or Motecuhzomatzin, and the meaning, "he who is angry in a noble manner." ("señor sañudo," Cod. Ramirez, p. 72; "qui se fache en seigneur," Siméon, Dict. de la Langue Nahuatl, s. v.).
- MOQUIHUIX, 33. The fourth ruler of Tlatilolco. He assumed the power in 1441, according to some writers (Bustamente, Tezcoco, en los Ultimos Tiempos de sus Antiguos Reyes, p. 269). The name probably means "He who comes forth a freeman." See Ixtlilxochitl, Historia Chichimeca, caps. 36, 51.
- NACXITL TOPILTZIN, 105, 107. Nacxitl, "the four footed" (nahui, ixitl), was the name of one of the gods of the merchants (Sahagun, Hist. de Nueva España, Lib. I, c. 19). In the song it is applied to Quetzalcoatl, who was also regarded as a guardian of merchants.
- NAHUATL (9, etc.). A term applied to the language otherwise known as Aztec or Mexican. As an adjective it means "well-sounding," or, pleasant to the ear. From this, the term Nahua is used collectively for all tribes who spoke the Nahuatl tongue. Nahuatl also means clever, skillful, and the derivation is probably from the root na, to know.
- NECAXECMITL, 46. Name of uncertain meaning of a person otherwise unknown.
- NEZAHUALCOYOTL, 35, 67, 119. Chief of the Acolhuas, and ruler in Tezcoco from 1427 to 1472, or thereabouts. He was a distinguished patron of the arts and a celebrated poet. See p. 35, et seq.
- NEZAHUALPILLI, or NEZAHUALPIZINTLI, 14, 125. Ruler of Acolhuacan, son of Nezhualcoyotl. His accession is dated in 1470 or 1472.
- NONOHUALCO, 105, 125. Name of one of the quarters of the ancient city of Mexico; also of a mountain west of the valley of Mexico. The derivation is probably from onoc, to lie down; onohua, to sleep; onohuayan, a settled spot, an inhabited place. The co is a postposition.
- NOPAL or NOPALTZIN, 46. Ruler of Acolhuacan, A. D. 1260-1263, according to some chronologies. The name is from nopalli, the cactus or opuntia.
- NOPILTZIN, 67, 91. "My son," or "my lord," a term of deference applied to superiors, from pilli, which means son and also lord, like the old English child. Cf. Topiltzin.
- OTOMIS, 16, 49, 58, 64, 71, 95. A nation which inhabited a portion of the valley of Mexico and region adjacent, entirely dissimilar in language and appearance from the Nahuas. The etymologies suggested are unsatisfactory.
- POPOCATEPETL, 46. "The smoking mountain," the name of a famous volcano

- rising from the valley of Mexico.
- POYAUHTECATL, 105. A volcano near Orizaba (Sahagun. Hist. de Nueva España, Lib. I, cap. 21). Derived from poyaua, to color, to brighten.
- QUANTZINTECOMATZIN, 41. A warrior not otherwise known. The name is a double reverential, from quani, eater, and tecomatl, vase, "The noble eater from the royal dish."
- QUAUHQUECHOLLAN, 95. A village and plain near the southern base of Popocatepetl. It means "the place of the quechol woods," or the trees among which quechol birds are found. See Motolinia, Historia de los Indios, Trat. III, cap. 18.
- QUAUHXILOTL, 89. Name of a large tree, and applied to a warrior, ruler of Iztapallocan, whom Ixtlilxochitl, King of Tezcucó, placed at the head of his troops in his war with Tezozomoc. See Clavigero, Storia Antica di Messico, Tom. I, p. 185.
- QUETZALCOATL, 32, 143, 144. See note on p. 143.
- QUETZALMAMATZIN, 91. Name of a warrior, "the noble one of the beautiful hands" (quetzalli, mama, pl. of maítl, and rev. term. tzin). Perhaps the same as Quetzalmemalitzin, ruler of Teotihuacan, mentioned by Ixtlilxochitl, Historia Chichimeca, cap. 35.
- QUIAUHTZIN, 93. Name of a warrior, "The noble rain" (quiauitl, tzin).
- TENOCHTITLAN, 85. The current name for the City of Mexico; literally, "at the stone-nopal," from tetl, stone, nochtli, nopal, and postpos., llan. The term refers to an ancient tradition.
- TEPANECAS or TECPANECAS, 35. A powerful nation of Nahuatl lineage, who dwelt in the valley of Mexico. They were destroyed in 1425 by the Acolhuas and Mexicans, and later the state of Tlacopan was formed from their remnants. Comp. probably from tecpan, a royal residence, with the gentile termination.
- TEPEYACAC, TEPEYACAN, 93. From tepetl, mountain, yacatl, nose, point, and postpos., c. 1. A small mountain on which the celebrated church of the Virgin of Guadalupe now stands. 2. A large town and state subject to ancient Mexico, now Tepeaca in the province of Puebla.
- TETLAPAN QUETZANITZIN, 68, 69. A ruler of Tlatilolco, contemporary of the conquest. See Note to Song VI.
- TETZCOCO, now TEZCUCO, 14, 35, 36, 77. Capital city of Acolhuacan, and residence of Nezahualcoyotl. It has been called "the Athens of Anahuac." The derivation of the name is from a plant called letzculli (Cod. Ramirez).
- TEZOMOC, TEZOMOCTLI, 35, 39, 67, 88, 89. A ruler of the Tepanecas, celebrated for his warlike skill and severity. His death is placed in the year 1427. The name, like Montezuma, is derived from zoma, to be angry, in this case from the reduplicated frequentative form, zozoma.
- TIZATLAN, 103. "The place of white varnish" (tizatl), the name of one of the four quarters of the city of Tlascala.

- TLACOMIHUATZIN, 93. "The noble cousin of the lynx" (tlacomiztli, lynx, huan, postpos., denoting affinity, tzin, reverential). The name of a warrior.
- TLACOPAN, now TACUBA, 135. A small state west of Mexico and subject to it, built up on the ruins of the ancient Tepanecas. Comp. from tlacolli, a slave.
- TLAHUICAN, 118. A Nahuatl province south of the valley of Mexico, so called from the cinnabar, tlahuittl, there obtained (Buschmann; but the Cod. Ramirez gives the meaning "toward the earth," from tlalli and huic).
- TLAILOTLACAN, 140. One of the seven divisions of the city of Tezcuco (Ixtilxochitl, Hist. Chichimeca, cap. 38).
- TLAILOTLAQUI, 84. Literally, "workers in refuse," or "scavengers." Said by M. Aubin to have been a tribe who settled in Tezcuco in the reign of Quinantzin. The term is apparently one of contempt.
- TLALMANALCO, 42. A village near the foot of the volcano Popocatepetl. Derived from tlalmanalli, level ground, with postpos. co.
- TLALNAHUACATL, 89. "Dweller on the land," name of a warrior.
- TLALOC, 45. God of rain and the waters; a famous divinity among the ancient Mexicans. The word means "stretched on the earth," and the idol of the god represented a man extended on his back holding a vase.
- TLAPALLAN, 105. A mythical land from which the Toltecs were fabled to have come and to which Quetzalcoatl returned. The derivation is from tlapalli, color, especially red.
- TLATETOLCO, TLATILULCO, 33, 83, 85. A suburb of the ancient city of Mexico, founded in 1338; from tlatelli, a mound, ololoa, to make round, the sense being "an island." See Motolinia, Historia de los Indios, Trat. III, cap. 7.
- TLAXCALLAN, now TLASCALA, 89, 93, 103. "The place of bread," from tlaxcalli, bread. Site of a warlike tribe of Nahuatl descent, east of the valley of Mexico.
- TLATZIN, 46. Chief of a town of the Chichimecs, situated on Lake Chalco. He flourished toward the close of the 14th century. From tlalli, a falcon.
- TOCHIN, 89. From tochtli, rabbit; name of the brother of the Tezcucan ruler Quinantzin, and of many other personages.
- TOLLAN, or TULAN, 46, 105, 107. The ancient mythical capital of the Toltecs. The common derivation from tolin, a rush, is erroneous. The name is a syncopated form of tonatlan, "the place of the sun."
- TOLTEC, properly TOLTECATL, 46, 111. An inhabitant of Tollan. The Toltecs were a mythical people, whose civilization was supposed to have preceded that of the Aztecs.
- TOPILTZIN, 46, 105. "Our son" or "Our lord" (see Nopiltzin). The term was especially applied to Quetzalcoatl, q. v. See Orozco y Berra, Hist. Antig. de Mexico, Tom. III, p. 54.

- TOTOQUILHUATLI, 41. From to-toquilia, to act as agent or lieutenant. Ruler of Tlaco-pan. The verse of the song in which this name occurs is given in the original Nahuatl by Ixtlilxochitl, who says it was very popular throughout New Spain. See his Historia Chichimeca, cap. 32.
- XICALANCO, 107. A locality on the borders of the province Tabasco. The people spoke Nahuatl. Deriv. xicalli, gourd or jar, and postpos. co.
- XICOMATZINTLAMATA, 34. Name of a warrior not otherwise known. The compound seems to mean "skillful with angry hand" (xicoa, maatl, tlamati).
- XICONTECATL, 103. Name of several distinguished Tlascalcan warriors, lords of Tizatlan. See Clavigero, Hist. Antica di Messico, Tom. III, pp. 38 and 40. One was a favorite of Nezahualcoyotl. See Ixtlilxochitl, Historia Chichimeca, cap. 40.
- XIUHTEUCTLI, 15. The god of fire, literally, "the lord of the year," or "of the foliage."
- XIUHTZAL, 46. A queen of ancient Tollan, said by Clavigero to have ruled from A. D. 979 to 984. Other writers give the name more correctly Xiuhltaltzin, "Lady of the Green Fields," and place her death in 987. (Orozco y Berra, Hist. Antig. de Mexico, Tom. III, p. 45.)
- XOLOTL, 46. An early if not the first king of the Chichimecs. His death occurred in 1232.
- YOHUALLATONOC, 89. "Shining at night." Name of a warrior.
- YOPICO, 22. A division of the ancient city of Mexico, containing a temple of this name. The word means "the place of the tearing out of hearts" (yolltol, pi, co), from the form of sacrifice there carried out.
- YOVONTZIN, 35, 40, 66, 67. A name of Nezahualcoyotl. See p. 35.

LIBRARY

OF

Aboriginal American Literature.

Edited and Published by

DANIEL G. BRINTON, M.D.,

Professor of American Archaeology and Linguistics, in the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, U. S. A.

---

THE aim of the editor of this series is to put within the reach of students authentic materials for the study of the languages and culture of the native race of America.

The plan is to print only such works as have been composed in the native languages by the natives themselves, thus presenting these tongues in their real forms. The jargons or mixed dialects, whose importance in linguistic science is now recognized, are included in this scheme. It is also kept in view to select productions which have some historic or ethnologic value beyond that to philology alone, and each is accompanied with translations, notes, etc.

There have now been seven volumes of the library issued which can be obtained separately at the prices affixed. The editions are limited to about 400 copies, barely enough to meet the expenses of manufacture, and it is hoped that the interest in American ethnology will be sufficient to admit of the continuance of the series. There remains in the editor's hands abundant material for this. If the expenses of the works can be defrayed by their sale, he hopes to publish the following additional volumes:

I. ABORIGINAL AMERICAN ANTHOLOGY.—A collection of songs from ten or a dozen Indian tribes, with notes, metrical and literal translations, etc. The material for this is almost ready.

II. NATIVE AMERICAN CALENDARS.—A collection of astronomical and astrological calendars in the native languages of Mexico and Central America. A mass of curious and suggestive native lore.

III. THE ANNALS OF CUAUHTITLAN.—The original text, with a new and correct translation of this, the most valuable of all the native chronicles of ancient Mexico.

IV. PROSE AND POETRY FROM THE NAHUATL.—A selection of extracts from Nahuatl writers, in prose and verse, from MSS. or extremely rare books, illustrating the development of the language and the psychology of the nation.

V. LEGENDS OF THE MICMACS.—A collection of legends and tales in the Micmac tongue, composed by natives, with literal translations and a comparative study of Algonkin folk-lore.

VI. THE BOOKS OF CHILAN BALAM.—The sacred volume of the modern Mayas, one of the most remarkable compositions of the native American mind.

These and other works of a similar character will be issued from time to time, if sufficient interest in the series is manifested by students of this branch, by libraries and private collectors, to meet the cost of publishing them.

Up to the present time this has scarcely been the case; and the editor feels that he has, perhaps, undertaken a task which should be that of a Society rather than a private individual; but he hopes the result of this appeal will enable him to continue the enterprise.

In order to show the estimate which has been placed by critics and scholars upon this series, so far as issued, the editor permits himself to quote the following:—

OPINIONS AND PRESS NOTICES.

"It is to be hoped that the Indian publications which Dr. Brinton is issuing will meet with a wide circle of readers, and that others besides scholars of this department will interest themselves to aid the work he has so vigorously and successfully begun. To his call on 'learned societies, enlightened governments, liberal institutions, and individuals throughout the world' to help preserve the native American literature, there should be many Americans, at least, to respond."—Prof. C. H. Toy, in the American Journal of Philology. Vol. V.

"The efforts of Dr. Brinton should be welcomed by all antiquarian students, for they are not only original contributions, but are presented in a readable and interesting manner."—The American Antiquarian. Vol. VI.

"Scholars everywhere should vie with each other in encouraging this laudable enterprise of Dr. Brinton. There are many specimens of aboriginal literary skill extant, which should be included in this library, as they are almost inaccessible at present."—The Kansas City Review, Aug., 1885.

"Around the 'red man' native to America, there clusters an ever deepening interest, and the desire to know more concerning him increases every day. Such books as those which Dr. Brinton has given to the public are well adapted to meet these requirements."—The Chautauquan, Oct., 1885.

"We must repeat our thanks to Dr. Brinton for this excellent series, and again express our sincere wishes for its success. To the antiquary, philologist and ethnologist these volumes are of the highest interest; and we hope that their publication will be continued until all available material is exhausted."—Notes and Queries, London, May, 1886.

Die Denkmäler, aus denen wir unsere Kenntnisse der früheren Zustände der amerikanischen Völker schöpfen können, reichen bekanntlich nicht weit zurück und sind mitunter höchst unzuverlässig. Was unsere Vorfahren, befangen von einer beschränkten und verkehrten Weltanschauung, versäumt haben, nämlich die spärlichen Ueberreste der literarischen Production der amerikanischen Aboriginer zu sammeln, jene Versäumniss nach Kräften gutzumachen, dies ist der Zweck einer von dem bekannten Amerikanisten DANIEL G. BRINTON in Philadelphia unternommenen Publication. . . .

BRINTON's Library muss in ihrer soliden Ausführung als ein Quellenwerk ersten Ranges bezeichnet werden.—Prof. Friedrich Müller, of Vienna, in the Mittheil. der Wiener Anthropol. Gesell.

"On ne peut que remercier le savant professeur de Philadelphie pour cette excellente édition. L'œuvre qu'il a entreprise et qu'il mène si activement, aura certainement pour resultat de répandre aux Etats-Unis le gout des études historiques Américaines. M. Brinton aura ainsi rendu un signalé service à l'ethnographie et à l'archéologie du nouveau continent."—Desiré Charnay, in the Revue d'Ethnographie, 1884.

"We hope that Dr. Brinton will receive every encouragement in his labors to disclose to Americans these literary antiquities of the Continent. He eminently deserves it, both by the character of his undertaking and the quality of his work."—The American (Philadelphia).

In 1885 the Société Américaine de France decreed the bestowal of a medal upon the editor of this series, in the following terms:—

“Une Médaille de la Société Américaine d’après une composition nouvelle de M. le statuaire Hégel, à M. le Docteur Daniel G. Brinton, à Philadelphie, délégué général de l’Alliance Scientifique Universelle pour les Etats-Unis, qui, dans ces derniers temps, s’est placé par ses nombreux et savants travaux au premier rang des Américanistes du Nouveau Monde.”—Rapport Annuel sur les Récompenses et Encouragements, Paris, 1885.

The following list of the numbers of the library already issued will acquaint the reader with the character of each. All are printed in uniform style, on heavy laid paper, of the best quality, and are bound in cloth only. Each work can be had separately for the price affixed.

NO. I. THE CHRONICLES OF THE MAYAS.

Edited by DANIEL G. BRINTON, M.D. 279 pages. Cloth, uncut, $5.00. ($3.00 when a complete set is ordered).

This volume contains five brief chronicles in the Maya language of Yucatan, written shortly after the conquest, and carrying the history of that people back many centuries. To these is added a history of the Conquest, written in his native tongue, by a Maya Chief, in 1562. The texts are preceded by an introduction on the history of the Mayas; their language, calendar, numerical system, etc.; and a vocabulary is added at the close.

“Dr. Brinton’s work upon the history of the Mayas of Yucatan, is a most important contribution to the literature of American antiquities. Comparative linguists, as well as archaeologists, will find a new and very interesting subject of study in these remains.”—The (London) Saturday Review.

“Jede Chronik wird im Originaltext, in englischer Uebersetzung und mit erklärenden Noten mitgetheilt. Diese Chroniken setzen uns in den Stand, die Geschichte des Maya-Stammes eine geraume Zeit hinter die Epoche der Eroberung des Landes durch die Spanier zurück zu verfolgen.”—Prof. Friedrich Müller in the Mitt. der Wiener Anthropol. Gesell.

"The author treats in a learned introduction of the name Maya, of the linguistic family designated by this word, of the origin of the tribe so-called, of their hieroglyphic books, and of the modern monuments of their literature. * * * The capital piece in the volume is the chronicle of Chicxulub, written by Nakuk Pech, in 1562. Here we have to do with an instructed and intelligent man, a Cacique deeply concerned in the great events of which his country was the theatre on the arrival of the Spaniards, who relates facts of which he was an eye witness. * * * In publishing these chronicles, and this interesting record of a native chieftain, the editor has rendered an important service to history."—Revue d'Ethnographie, 1884.

NO. II. THE IROQUOIS BOOK OF RITES.

Edited by HORATIO HALE. 222 pages. Cloth, uncut, $3.00.

This work contains, in the Mohawk and Onondaga languages, the speeches, songs and rituals with which a deceased chief was lamented and his successor installed in office. It may be said to throw a distinct light on the authentic history of Northern America to a date fifty years earlier than the era of Columbus. The Introduction treats of the ethnology and history of the Huron-Iroquois. A map, notes and a glossary complete the work.

"Mr. Hale's book is likely to make an epoch in North American Indian history, giving, as it does, a clearer insight than we have had before into the political constitution and fortunes, and the personal character of the famous 'Six Nations,' who played so prominent a part in the land before and during the Revolutionary War."—American Journal of Philology. Vol. V.

"This work may be said to open a field of Indian research new to ethnologists. * * * These precious relics of antiquity are concise in their wording, and full of meaning. * * * The additions made by Mr. Hale are almost as valuable as the text themselves."—The Nation, New York, September 13, 1883.

"The reputation of the author added to this fascinating title, will insure its favorable reception, not only by ethnologists, but also, the reading public. * * * A remarkable discovery, and indisputably of great ethnological value. * * * A book which is as suggestive as this must bear good fruit."—Science, August 31, 1883.

"The book is one of great ethnological value, in the light it casts on the political and social life, as well as the character and capacity, of the people with whom it originated."—Popular Science Monthly, November, 1883.

"It is full of instructive hints, particularly as bearing on the state of so-called savages before they are brought in contact with so-called civilized men. Such evidence is, from the nature of the case, very difficult to obtain, and therefore all the more valuable."—Prof. F. Max Müller.

"It is a philosophical and masterly treatise on the Iroquois league and the cognate tribes, their relations, language, mental characteristics and polity, such as we have never had of any nation of this Continent."—Dr. J. Gilmary Shea.

NO. III. THE COMEDY-BALLET OF GÜEGÜENCE.

Edited by DANIEL G. BRINTON, M.D. 146 pages. Cloth, uncut, $2.50.

A curious and unique specimen of the native comic dances, with dialogues, called bailes, formerly common in Central America. It is in the mixed Nahuatl-Spanish jargon of Nicaragua, and shows distinctive features of native authorship. The introduction treats of the ethnology of Nicaragua, and the local dialects, musical instruments, and dramatic representations. A map and a number of illustrations are added.

"Critics and Scholars are bound to recognize the value of this curious book."—The (London) Saturday Review.

"We have here a work of careful research. Nothing seems to be lacking which the interests of this new field of study demand."—The Boston Universalist Quarterly.

"The Güegüence is the only specimen now known of the native American comedy. The character of the principal figure is a marked type of that peculiar kind of humor preferred by the native mind. This original production, with its valuable notes, should attract attention and awake an intelligent interest."—The Universalist Quarterly, 1884.

NO. IV. A MIGRATION LEGEND of the CREEK INDIANS.

By A. S. GATSCHE. 251 pages. Cloth, uncut, $3.00.

This learned work offers a complete survey of the ethnology of the native tribes of the Gulf States. The strange myth or legend told to Gov. Oglethorpe, in 1732, by the Creeks, is given in the original, with an Introduction and Commentary.

"Mr. Gatschet's book is devoted to the early history and traditions of the tribes that inhabited the watershed of the north shore of the Gulf of Mexico, especially the Maskoki family, the most important member of which was the Creek Nation. The first part treats of the ethnic and linguistic groups of this region, the second part of the Kasi'hta form of the migration-legend. A second volume is to give the Hitchiti version, the notes and vocabulary. Mr. Gatschet has put into convenient shape a good deal of information respecting these tribes, and seems to have proceeded cautiously in the use of his authorities. He leaves undecided the question whether the Creeks crossed the Mississippi going eastward in their migration. His remarks on the mythology, though brief, are judicious. The linguistic remarks also are brief. The author thinks that the parent Maskoki language cannot now be reconstructed; at most a comparative grammar of the existing dialects might be written, and he points out what these dialects have in common, so far as can be made out from published accounts."—American Journal of Philology.

No. V. THE LENÂPÉ AND THEIR LEGENDS.

By Dr. DANIEL G. BRINTON. Cloth, uncut, $3.00.

Contains the complete text and symbols, 184 in number, of the WALAM OLUM or RED SCORE of the Delaware Indians, with the full original text, and a new translation, notes and vocabulary. A lengthy introduction treats of the Lenâpé or Delawares, their history, customs, myths, language, etc., with numerous references to other tribes of the great Algonkin stock.

"The editor, as might be expected from his well-known attainments, has illuminated this Indian narrative with a great wealth of illustration, historical, ethnological, and linguistic, set forth in a clear and attractive style. The recent history of the Delawares, their religious belief, their customs and language, are carefully explained, so far as is necessary for an understanding of the original work. Altogether, the volume may be fairly said to form one of the most important and interesting contributions to American archæology and ethnology that have appeared for many years."—The (New York) Critic.

"Dr. Brinton's wide reading and industrious research enable him to present us with useful materials, among which, if employed with due caution, the 'Walam Olum' must certainly be reckoned. The historical introductions are also valuable, especially as early Americana, copiously quoted here, are very scarce, and so expensive as often to be out of the reach of the student."—The London Saturday Review.

"Dr. D. G. Brinton's latest contribution (No. V) to the Library of Aboriginal American Literature is not less valuable than its predecessors. It gives many legends of the Lenapes and redeems from oblivion an aboriginal chronicle which has long been looked upon askance by Americanists and denounced, by not a few, as a forgery of the eccentric Rafinesque." * * * The Kansas City Review, 1885.

No. VI. THE ANNALS OF THE CAKCHIQUELS.

Edited by DANIEL G. BRINTON, M.D. 234 pages. Cloth, uncut, $3.00.

The original text, written about 1562, by a member of the reigning family, with a translation, introduction, notes and vocabulary. This may be considered one of the most important historical documents relating to the pre-Columbian period.

"Dr. Brinton's volume is one of those complete and satisfying treatises, marked by careful research, clear exposition, and judicious comment, to which he has accustomed his readers. The translation bears every mark of painstaking fidelity; and the introduction, notes and vocabulary supply all the aids that a student will need. It is to be hoped that the present work will be followed by the Popol Vuh of the Quichés—that remarkable record to which Brasseur's fanciful interpretations gave special notoriety, and which, under Dr. Brinton's recension, will assume its proper place and permanent value."—The (New York) Critic.

Dr. Brinton has added another interesting book to his editions of American texts. The Cakchiquels occupied a portion of the area of the present State of Guatemala. The annals here published are from the pen of one of their own authors, a member of a distinguished family. He describes the early history of his people and the arrival of the Castilians, with the events that followed their conquest. These are not very remarkable, but they serve to give a picture of the times.

The editor has prefixed an index in which he discusses the ethnological position of the Cakchiquels; their culture; their capital city; computation of time; personal and family names; tribal subdivisions; terms of affinity and salutations; titles and social castes; religious notions and language. The people, like the Mayas and Aztecs, were agriculturists and builders. They had the art of picture-writing, but the editor leaves it undecided whether their system was derived from that of the Mexicans or that of the Mayas. Their literature consisted of poems and dramas. The form of government was a limited monarchy, the regal power being divided between two families, to one of which belonged the author of the Annals.—The American Journal of Philology.

NO. VII. ANCIENT NAHUATL POETRY.

Edited by D. G. BRINTON, M.D. 176 pages. Cloth, uncut, $3.00.

In this volume twenty-seven songs in the original Nahuatl are presented, with translation, notes, vocabulary, etc. Many of them date from before the conquest, and none later than the sixteenth century. They have remained wholly unpublished and untranslated; several are attributed to the famous royal poet, Nezahualcoyotl. The introduction describes the ancient poetry of the Nahuas in all its bearings.

CONTENTS.—Introduction; the National Love of Poetry among the Azteca; the Poet and his Work; the Themes and Classes of the Songs; Prosody of the Songs; Vocal Delivery of the Songs; the Instrumental Accompaniment; the Preservation of the Ancient Songs; The LX Songs of the King Nezahualcoyotl; the History of the present Collection.

XXVII Ancient Nahuatl Poems, with English Translation.

Notes, Grammatical and Historical, upon the Native Text.

Vocabulary. Index of Nahuatl Proper Names, with Analysis.

In spite of the patient researches of Boturini, von Humboldt, Lord Kingsborough and others devoted to the preservation of the literature of the ancient Mexicans, not a single song of an authentic character has ever been published in the native tongue. Prescott, in his History of the Conquest of Mexico, Mühlensfordt, and later, H. H. Bancroft, have offered incorrect translations or imitations of these interesting productions; but in this volume, for the first time, the genuine originals are printed, with a coherent English version.

LaAm.

B8585k.

430 F

Author Brinton, Daniel Garrison [ed.]

Title Library of Aboriginal American literature.

University of Toronto Library

DO NOT REMOVE
THE CARD
FROM THIS POCKET

Acme Library Card Pocket
Under Pat. "Ref. Index File"
Made by LIBRARY BUREAU

